CARMEL prepared itself for another Fourth of July this week, as Mayor Charlotte Townsend (above, right) and City Administrator Doug Peterson raised a "No Parking" sign on the edge of Carmel Beach near the foot of Ocean Avenue, to indicate new restrictions which the city has enacted this year. Officials hope to be able to control problems associated with the Independence Day celebration, such as huge crowds which cause damage to the beach banks (below), bonfires, and illegal fireworks. Carmel braces for another July 4th

By ROBERT MISKIMON

ARMED WITH extra police officers and ordinances to control parking, fireworks, and beach fires, the city of Carmel is braced for another Fourth of July onslaught.

"Pray for rain," said Mayor Charlotte Townsend as she contemplated the approach of Independence Day.

This year, the city council has taken a number of steps to blunt the destructive effects wrought upon the village — particularly in the beach area — by hordes of celebrants which have numbered as high as 10,000.

By the time the last beach party has ended and cleanup crews have filled hundreds of litter bags, Carmel will have spent at least $5,000 to police the long weekend and — with any luck — will have survived without loss of life or serious injury to persons or property.

"We'll have everyone in our department working on the Fourth of July," Police Chief John McGilvray said. "And we'll be getting some help from off-duty sheriff's deputies and Salinas police."

Carmel has contracted for the services of five Monterey County sheriff's deputies and three Salinas police; four additional officers will work on the day shift and four on the night shift, McGilvray indicated. They may work longer, if conditions demand it, he added.

There will be 12 Carmel police officers on duty as well as four traffic control officers and two or three desk officers from the regular police force, the chief said. Total law enforcement manpower will be about 27.

"Some officers will man fixed positions at the parking barricades and some will patrol the beach area; the bulk of the manpower will be at the beach," Chief McGilvray said. "Just about everyone on the force will get some overtime, as well."

McGilvray stressed that the only fireworks which will be allowed on Carmel Beach are the "Safe and Sane" variety approved by the state fire marshall. These are the type of fireworks which "don't explode or leave the ground," the chief said.

"With what we have planned, hopefully we will have a considerable degree of cooperation from beachgoers. With the parking restrictions, we can keep the roads open. If the people will cooperate, we'll have an orderly Fourth of July."

Restrictions on the size of beach fires will be enforced primarily by officers who will keep an eye out for large accumulations of combustible materials which could be used

Supervisors' pay raises

Dear Editor

"As flies to wanton boys are we, they kill us for their sport" — a paraphrase of Shakespeare to keep in mind as the voter is inflamed by the spectacle of a part-time Petrovic and an over-time Peters, both threatening to vote against the county's $122 million budget unless nickels are emptied from or poured into a politician's — or is it a monkey's — cup?

Is it really loss of state revenue that propels this shift from humane to amoral bureaucracy (pay raises in place of social services and health care to the disadvantaged and elderly)?

Is it panic or an intellectual crisis in local public administration that has petitions coming from the Monterey County Employees Association challenging pay raises for executive personnel even as their own ethos, norms, and values reflecting institutional purposes are regressive insofar as they fail to anticipate macro-economic effects on state and local government supply-demand characteristics?

Oil is simply added to the fire by passing the bill rather than the buck to the county auditor who is asked to eliminate three more positions in his office than those of the chief administrative officer.

The Peter Principle (Why Things Always Go Wrong) suggests we vote against The Organization Guerilla (Playing the Game to Win) in favor of the Management Tactician (Executive Tactics for Getting Results). No more than six days furlough for the entire 2,255-member work force of the county would resolve the current budget crisis.

The voter could use their vacation without pay to educate himself on the issues as push comes to shove. In Shakespearian style, were he to "give true evidence of his love which stands an honourable trial," a discerning vote could overcome inertial conflicts that place actors on a stage with little minds and no hearts for restructuring the pricing context to offset these pitiful vagaries of supervisorial authority operating with less principle and control than a political economy with cross-the-product and cross-market leverage.

Knock department heads together for "patent interchanges" and Monterey can gain a competitive advantage in Sacramento if our Assemblyman is listening. The organ grinder stands no further away than Monterey's Fisherman's Wharf. Have you ever seen the bags of nickels he takes regularly to the bank?

EIR coverage 'misleading'

Dear Editor:

The Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook headlines and article on the draft Environmental Impact for Canada Segunda distorts the information presented in the EIR and it is also misleading.

The headline states, "Sewage Disposal Problems Cited in the EIR." That is erroneous and not true.

One of the most comprehensive sewage disposal studies ever performed on a Carmel Valley property was undertaken for the Morgens property under the supervision of the Monterey County Health Department. This study included machine excavating 61 large test pits to evaluate soil mantle and profiles in 22 areas throughout the property; percolation studies using the most conservative methods preferred by the Regional Water Quality Control Board; soil borings and all terrain augers and depth to ground water studies.

It was only after these studies that site planning was performed for the project. All of this field work and test date has been formally accepted by the Monterey County Health Department. This field work and test data clearly indicated that a waste water disposal system with a high degree of disbursal and excellent filtration could be engineered for the Morgens property which would insure against any potential sewage effluent migrating in the Carmel Valley aquifer.

The waste water disposal system planned for Canada Segunda has been granted conceptual approval by the health department under the rigorous standards of the county's new requirement for community systems.

Your headline said, "Erosion Problems Cited in the EIR." That is erroneous and not true.

Page iv in the EIR summary states that a detailed grading plan would be a part of the development with specific erosion control measures that would reduce an erosion impact to "insignificant level."

Your headline noted drainage was cited as a problem in the EIR. Another case where you chose to gloss over all the information presented in the EIR.

Page v in the EIR summary clearly states — the drainage system proposed reduces the potential drainage impact to "insignificant level." Any reading of pages 27 and 28 makes this clear.

Your article stated fire protection would be a significant problem. That is erroneous and not true.

Page x of the EIR summary states the requirements for the project by the Mid-Valley Fire Department will reduce fire concerns to "insignificant level." This is clearly detailed on pages 70-72 in the EIR.

Your news article mentioned that the EIR noted the site lies within the range of three rare and endangered life species — the Bald Eagle, California Condor and Peregrine Falcon. What you didn't report was the EIR stated: "It does not contain any habitats critical for their survival."

Before any development planning was undertaken for the Morgens property thorough environmental and planning studies were made for sewage disposal, vegetation and wildlife, archaeology, slope analysis, densities, water, drainage, and micro-climates. This resulted in one of the most comprehensive pre-planning studies ever undertaken for a Carmel Valley property. This work is reflected in the quality and sensitivity of the plan for the development of the Morgens property.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The apparent discrepancy arises from the fact that most of the Pine Cone/Outlook article dealt with environmental impacts cited in the Canada Segunda environmental impact report, while Mr. Marquard mentions a number of measures proposed to mitigate those environmental effects. Mr. Marquard is correct that the county health department has given "conceptual approval" to the proposed waste water disposal system. The purpose of the EIR is to define all foreseeable adverse environmental impacts from the proposed development and to suggest possible remedies, which is what the EIR for the Canada Segunda project does. The potentially adverse environmental impacts — and the proposed mitigation measures — will be considered by the county planning staff and planning commission when applications for subdivision and rezoning are considered. The EIR itself can not be certified by the county until after the 1980 Carmel Valley Master Plan is revised and readopted, and its contents may be subject to change based on the final shape of the Master Plan.)

Was lease considered?

Dear Editor:

Last year when the Board of Education of the Carmel Unified School District began publicly considering the sale of Woods School, several board members said that they would welcome any offer by a private school but that they did not believe one would be forthcoming. Apparently they did not feel it was necessary to test the validity of their belief, for the school was never advertised.

However, at the board meeting of June 24 an offer was made by a private school to lease Woods School for the coming school year for $94,000. Invested at current interest rates, this offer would obviously generate even more money for the district.

The lease would in no way interfere with the board's immediate plan to sell two of the undeveloped lots on the site, and at the end of this period it would still be possible to proceed with their intention to demolish the school and sell the property — property which would have undoubtedly increased in value.

In light of these conditions, it seems incomprehensible to me that the board would not consider altering their proposed course, yet that is exactly what they did, even though the offer would be more lucrative and would also leave them an option to consolidate Woods and River Schools, which it appears from the 1982-83 proposed budget will cost more to operate than it did to operate them independently.

Stop the annexation

Dear Editor:

MAJORITY RULE?

More and more of our public processes, as envisioned by the founders of our republic, are being subverted by legislation that has nothing to do with common sense logic, let alone the principle of majority rule, i.e. Carmel Woods annexation.

Logic would say "let 50 percent of more of the property owners of Carmel Woods petition for annexation.

No! Five percent of the "registered voters" may initiate proceedings.

Logic would say that the property owners of the municipality involved (Carmel-by-The-Sea) should have a voice in the proceedings.

No! Less than 50 percent of the Carmel Woods "voters" can accomplish the proceedings, without even an election.

This is not what the " democratic process" is supposed to be about.

If you live in Carmel Woods you still have a choice to:

Not add another layer of bureaucracy to your lives!

Not increase your taxes!

Not have your personal rights dictated by a minority!

When asked, please sign the petition to stop annexation.

The Mayor's Report

Let's hope this July 4th isn't the last of its kind

By CHARLOTTE TOWNSEND

HOW TO KEEP the irresponsible few from spoiling things for everyone else is a problem frequently faced by lawmakers.

Unhappily, restrictions written to control the "rotten apples" must apply to all, and all too often this results in abrogation of many freedoms or pleasures formerly enjoyed by the well behaved majority. Whether or not to allow, or to ban fireworks, and even bon — fires on Carmel beach this July Fourth was a difficult decision for a new council. The decision was close — a 3-2 vote. An appeal was made for the children (of all ages, perhaps!) who do so enjoy the traditional fireworks and I think this may have influenced those of us who voted to allow them, at least on more time. It was done in the hope that we can return celebration of the Fourth to the "family" type of activity that it was formerly.

Let us also hope that this is possible, because if this year is another "Dunkirk-by-the-Sea" then I am sure it will be the last. And it is, of course, entirely up to all of those who come. There will be additional restrictions and additional police but mainly it is a question of enforcing the rules we have always had. Please be aware of the restrictions on parking, fires and fireworks. Please pay attention not only to what you do but what your neighbors do. Let us stress that the Fourth should be a day when parents, children and friends can celebrate the birth of our nation without the fear of problems, injuries and ugly people. It is up to all of us!

Whatever you plan to do on the Fourth, try to go to the Forest Theatre that day to hear the mariachi band. It will be the first of the Sunday afternoon concerts, which all start at Two. Everyone who has heard them will agree that it's great music.

Although there has been some opposition I have had mostly positive "feedback" about the idea of setting some sort of time limit on length of council meetings. Our new council is about two months old. The first council meeting lasted until 11:50 p.m. and another one went until 12:20 p.m. Most people on the council, in the audience and certainly the staff have already put in an eight hour day, and are expected to be at work the next morning with undiminished vigor. To sit for more than three or four more hours, to concentrate, be alert, flexible and to make wise decisions is asking a lot when one is physically tired. There is no question of "limiting" input, or of "cutting anyone off." The idea is rather one of setting a goal.

I hope we can always remain adaptable. If the question is urgent and debate brisk, there is no reason why a meeting shouldn't go on as long as necessary. As always, it would only take a majority vote. Each of us on the council is one voice, one vote only. And we'd do well to keep that in mind always.

Once again, I hope you know that I've set aside Monday and Wednesday afternoons to be at City Hall and available to meet or to talk with you. Come see me or phone, please.

Peters says supervisors' pay hikes are justified despite budgetary crisis

By ROBERT MISKIMON

FIFTH DISTRICT Monterey County Supervisor Wiliam Peters of Carmel Valley believes salary increases for supervisors are justified — even in the face of massive budget retrenchments — although he admits the idea "may look funny."

Supervisor Peters has been a consistent advocate of higher salaries for supervisors as Monterey County tries to come to grips with the challenge of balancing a battered $122 million budget for 1982-83.

The board of supervisors wrestled with the budget in a series of meetings last week but ended its labors still $1 million short of a balanced budget and with an officially-declared state of fiscal emergency. Practically no department of county government has been spared.

Supervisors agreed to wipe out 35 staff positions in the social services department, and have made deep cuts in the sheriff's department. Public works, elections, parks and other county departments have all felt the budget blade. (See related story in this issue).

Supervisor Michal Moore of Del Rey Oaks, for one, has suggested that the county shut down all but emergency services several days next year to help balance the budget.

And yet, Supervisor Peters and Supervisor Moore steadfastly have continued to lobby for increases in supervisors' salaries, even as the Monterey County Employees Association submitted petitions with the signatures of more than 800 county employees opposed tc supervisorial pay hikes when nearly 190 county staff positions will be eliminated in the budget.

"It may look funny for us to talk about raising our salaries," Supervisor Peters told the Pine Cone/Outlook. "But this is a full-time job and if we're going to work full-time we should be paid full-time."

The proposal for supervisors' pay raises would set their salaries at 60 percent of the pay received by municipal court judges, whose compensation is set by state law. That proposed increase was down-scaled by 15 percent before supervisors decided to continue consideration of the matter until November.

Current salary for a Monterey County supervisor is about $21,000 per year. The originally proposed formula (60 percent of municipal court judges' pay) would increase the supervisors' salaries to about $36,000. The down-scaled increase would be about $31,000 per year.

Aside from those proposed increases, supervisors already are scheduled to get a 5 percent pay increase in July and a 4 percent hike on Jan. 1, 1983.

PETERS SAID he feels the salary increases are justified by the fact that the job of supervisor has changed and grown over the years.

"We're faced with a real fiscal crunch, but there are some real inequities in the system," Peters said. "The complexity of county government has increased, especially since Prop. 13 was passed. The number of registered voters and the number of people who want your attention have increased.

SUPERVISOR William Peters of Carmel Valley believes supervisors should increase their own salaries despite huge fiscal retrenchments because of the growing complexity and responsibility of the job. (R.M. photo).

"The job of supervisor is definitely full-time, except in Supervisor Petrovic's (Third Supervisorial) District," Peters said. Supervisor Petrovic of King City opposed the salary increase and threatened to vote against adoption of the budget unless the pay hikes were rescinded.

Supervisor Petrovic said the size and diversity of his district make his job no less demanding than the job of any other county supervisors.

"My district is the biggest in the county," Petrovic said. "It takes up about two-thirds of Monterey County from Marina all the way down to San Miguel. By its size, composition, ethnic and social makeup, it's the most complex district in the county.

"Of course, you can make any job full-time," Supervisor Petrovic said. "I answer every call, do a weekly newspaper column and a weekly radio interview and travel all over my district.

"The whole issue isn't about what the job pays; it's the fact that we (supervisors) knew what it paid when we ran for office. Now the board has to take the lead in cutting back when we're cutting back everything else in the budget, and not try to grab everything it can get.

"If the board implements this raise, I will not accept it," Petrovic said. He noted that he has refused a $250-per-month salary increase approved by the board of supervisors since 1978.

Peters ticked off a list of activities in which he is engaged as a supervisor, beyond his regular supervisorial duties, to indicate the amount of time required for the job.

"I'm on the air pollution control district board of directors, the transit board, the water management board, a four-county health agency, I'm chairman of LAFCO (Local Agency Formation Commission) and I serve on the county legislative committee."

His participation in the county legislative committee involves "trying to pinpoint those things the state is requiring us to do that cost us money," the result of which should be increased governmental cost-effectiveness, Supervisor Peters said.

"If you combine services to constituents and the homework required for all those other agencies, there's no question it's a full-time job easily equal to that of a department head in responsibility. And if the supervisors don't manage the county, the bureaucracy will run the county."

The passage of Prop. 13 has vastly complicated the responsibility of supervisors to run a fiscally balanced county government, Peters said.

"This job has shifted from a part-time job generally held by men in retirement who wanted to provide a service to their community, to a job which is a business and a full-time managerial task which is increasing in complexity," Peters said.

"Before Prop. 13, all supervisors had to do to pass a budget was figure out the cost of government, raise the tax rates to pay for it, and adopt the budget. They could do the whole process in a half-day."

Supervisors' jobs have undergone the same metamorphosis all across the country, Peters added. Unless salaries are raised to reflect the level of responsibility and time involved in the job, Peters said, supervisors have two choices:

'I CAN cut back on the time I put into the job and seek other part-time employment or not serve as supervisor. The public gets a better return for their dollar to have us working full-time for them and lobbying for them in Sacramento and Washington."

Richard Butrick, deputy director of the County Supervisors Association of California, said some the job of supervisor is considered full-time in some counties and part-time in others.

"It varies all over the place," Butrick said. "History says most counties have considered it a full-time position. But it's a growing phenomenon that supervisors are, in effect, full-time."

For example, San Francisco supervisors are paid $9,600 per year as part-time county employees, which Butrick called "just ridiculous" in view of their responsibilities and the time involved in the job.

Supervisor Peters said he "isn't happy" with the proposed cutbacks in the Monterey County Sheriff's Department, and said he is "unwilling to accept" some proposed cutbacks in social services.

Peters said he would prefer to see more cutbacks in the civil, rather than criminal, division of the sheriff's department if necessary to balance the budget. And he said he feels reduction or elimination of social services is not cost-effective.

"These social services cutbacks will cause many people to go to jail or to the county hospital," Peters said. "I would oppose those reductions on the basis it's not a good business decision."

With respect to the current debate on the Monterey Peninsula Water District Board of Directors — of which Peters is a member — concerning construction of another dam on the upper Carmel River, Peters said all alternatives should be explored.

These alternatives include a dam proposed by the Monterey County Flood Control and Water Conservation District for construction on the Arroyo Seco River, and a scheme to store additional water in the Seaside aquifer through underground injection wells, Peters said.

The proposed Arroyo Seco dam could provide 43,000 ac. ft. of storage at a cost of $113 million for Salinas Valley use, or 80,000 ac. ft. of storage — with 22,000 ac. ft. for the Monterey Peninsula — at a cost of $150 million, according to a report by the flood control district.

Peters pushed to have the question of a dam on the upper Carmel River placed on the November, 1983 ballot to get some indication from the public whether they favor the $77 million dam as early as possible.

Peters said he wanted to make it clear that — as a director of the water management district — he favored inclusion of funds for preparation of an environmental impact report on the dam, but said he was opposed to hiring one EIR sub-contractor.

"I didn't want Dick Recht to do the population projections because the set they already prepared were not realistic or accurate," Peters said. "I think the growth will be much less than they projected. I just wanted to get a decision in November on whether to spend big bucks for the dam.

"We already know a lot about it, but there are some areas that won't be fully assessed until the middle of next year."

Does Supervisor Peters favor the construction of another dam on the upper Carmel River?

"I favor an augmentation of the water supply specifically for drought protection and an adequate supply for reasonable buildout under the local coastal programs and county master plans. That level of demand does not require a major dam."

Patrol personnel may be reduced, sheriff says

By ROBERT MISKIMON

PATROL FUNCTIONS of the Monterey County Sheriff's Department in Carmel Valley, the unincorporated areas around Carmel, and Pebble Beach would be diminished under budget cutbacks proposed by the board of supervisors.

Monterey County Sheriff D.B. (Bud) Cook told the Pine Cone/Outlook that the contemplated budget reductions would result in the dismissal of two deputies from the Monterey Peninsula station, two from the Salinas station, and one from the King City station.

"The bottom line is, we're going to have to lay off deputy sheriffs," Cook said. "It will affect patrol levels in Carmel Valley and also along the coast a[illegible] in Pebble Beach."

The impact of the cutbacks would probably be felt in the midnight-to-8 a.m. patrol, the sheriff indicated. Present staffing level during those hours on the Monterey Peninsula consists of two, two-deputy patrol cars. If the proposed cuts are implemented, that would be slashed to just one, two-deputy patrol car on that shift, Cook said.

The preliminary county budget for 1982-83 included a recommendation from Monterey County Administrator Richard Andrews that $1.8 million be appropriated for all operations of the sheriff's department.

"At the June 11 budget discussions, I suggested to the board that the county administrative officer's budget would devastate our office," Cook said. "It would have resulted in 20 positions being eliminated."

Supervisors favored a program of moderate cutbacks suggested by the sheriff to reduce his original budget request of $8.2 million by $600,000.

"When we went into budget sessions on June 21, the board said they needed $175,000 more cut out of my budget," Cook said. "To cut any more, we're talking about people on the street. This will have to come out of people; we're talking about seven or eight people being laid off."

A tug-of-war developed between the sheriff and the superior court administrator over a proposal to eliminate four bailiff positions in the sheriff's department. The dispute was over which department — court administrator or sheriff — would get the credit for the $40,000 cut.

"The superior court administrator suggested terminating four bailiffs from the sheriff's department and hiring civilians to replace them," Cook related. "They would take my four bailiffs at an annual cost of $120,000 and replace them with four civilians for $80,000.

"The supervisors jumped at that and took $40,000 from the overall county budget picture. If I can take the credit, then I won't have to cut the full $175,000 from my budget and a few positions can be saved. If not, then we'll lose more deputies."

In addition to the effects of the budget cutbacks on patrol personnel, Cook said he is concerned about the potential impact upon the county jail, where the average population is about 475 persons per day. "I can't make any more reductions there," he said flatly.

"I'm really concerned about any reductions in my department's budget," Cook said. "The people who talk to me say they don't want any cuts in the sheriff's department. The mood of the public was reflected in the recent vote on the bail issue and on the victim's bill of rights.

"Because my department is funded out of the general fund, we rely almost totally on local money. I'm upset but I realize there's no easy decision by the supervisors.

"We're in a critical business. I'd be the last one to want to tell people to call back later when we're not so busy."

Carmel prepares for the July 4th celebration for bonfires, McGilvray indicated.

"We hope to discourage the large bonfires before they start," he said.

THE CHIEF'S advice for Carmelites and visitors on Independence Day:

"Try to enjoy the Fourth by making certain that whatever they do is safe and sane so we don't have any tragedies."

City Administrator Doug Peterson estimated that about $1,200 would be spent by the city in overtime pay for regular police personnel, plus an equal amount for the sheriff's deputies and Salinas police under contract for the day.

Another $500 will be spent for the services of a tow truck to help enforce parking regulations, plus $500 for the printing of "No Parking" posters, $900 for portable toilets, and about $1,500 for overtime street crews and cleanup personnel, Peterson said.

This is the first year that Carmel has hired the services of outside law enforcement personnel for the Fourth of July, he added.

"The primary purpose in all these regulations is public safety," Peterson said. The city administrator enumerated these restrictions which will be in effect:

• Scenic Drive and portions of adjacent streets will be completely closed to vehicles.

• Parking will be completely prohibited from 8 a.m. to midnight, July 4, on these streets: Scenic Drive from Ocean Avenue to southern city limits; San Antonio Avenue from northern to southern city limits; Ocean Avenue from Camino Real to San Antonio Avenue; 13th Avenue from Carmelo Street to San Antonio Avenue; Santa Lucia Avenue from Camino Real to Scenic. Cars parked in those areas will be subject to towing and impoundment.

• Fires on the beach will be prohibited within 25 feet of any wall, vegetation or combustible material.

• Beach fires are limited to seven feet in height, and may be no larger than required for cooking and warmth. No bonfires are permitted.

• Fires will not be allowed on beach bank areas.

• Only "Safe and Sane" fireworks which bear the seal of the state fire marshall will be permitted on the beach; no fireworks of any description may be used in any areas of Carmel other than the beach.

To complement actions taken by the Carmel City Council, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors has enacted an urgency ordinance to control traffic on Scenic Drive in the unincorporated Carmel Point area on the Fourth of July.

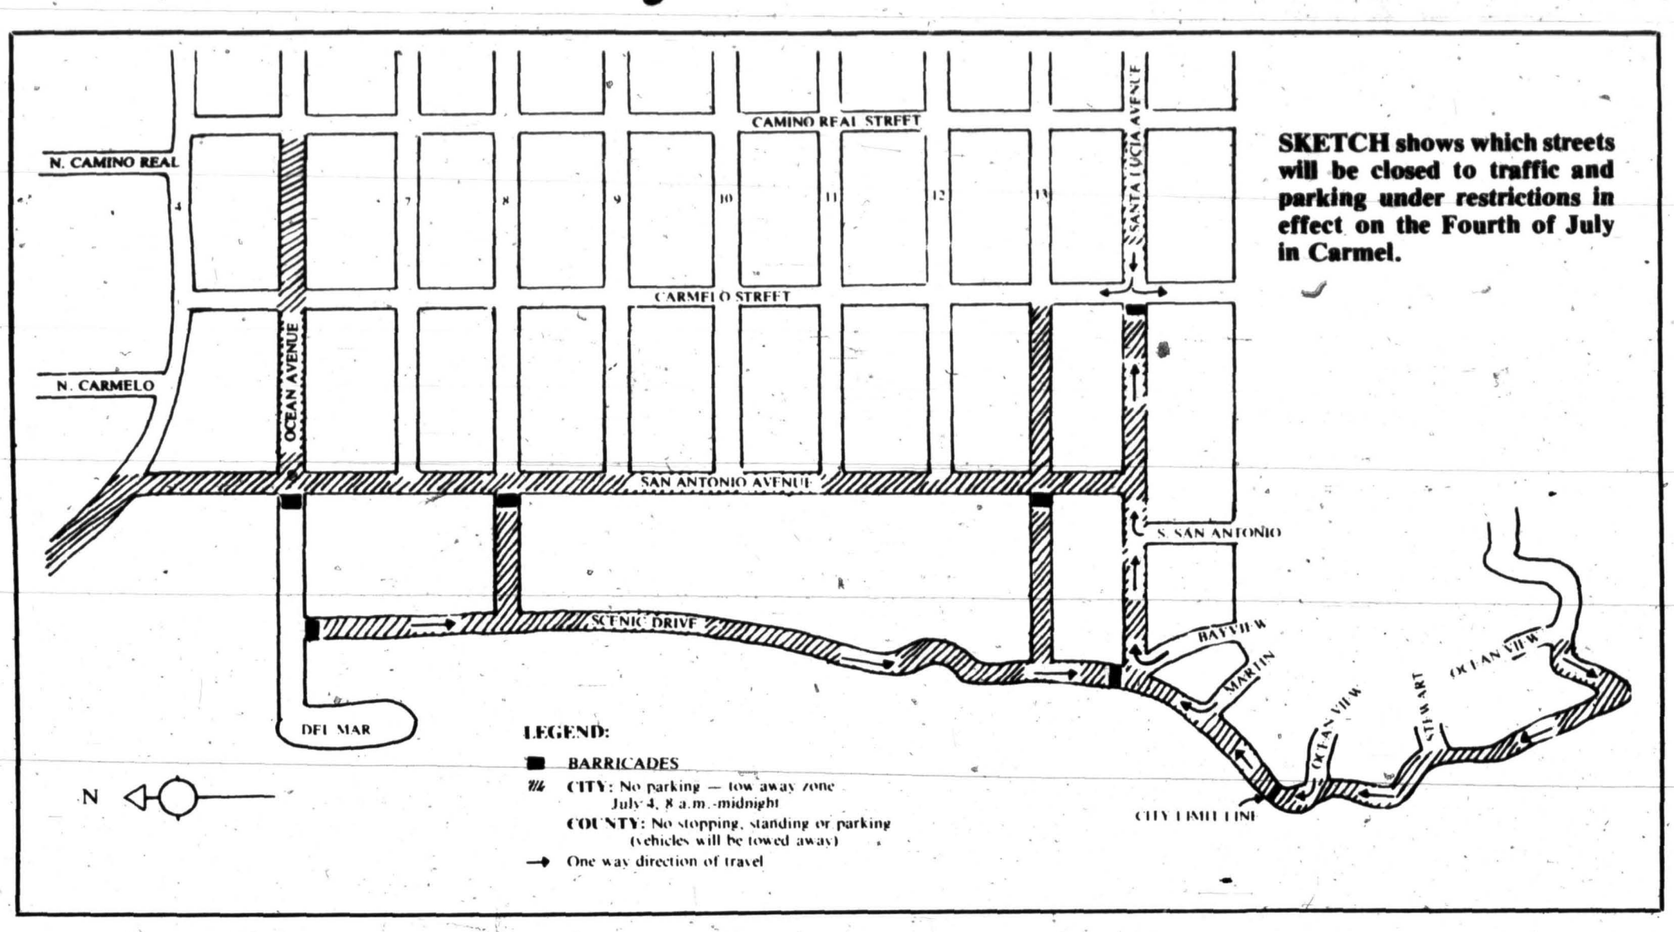
The ordinance designates Scenic Drive as a one-way northerly highway from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. on July 4 from the southerly intersection of Ocean Avenue northerly to the Carmel city limits.

Monterey County Sheriff said his office had been asked by several citizens to do something to control traffic and crowds in the Carmel Point area on Independence Day.

"My department will assign additional personnel (and) the Carmel police department is hiring additional personnel," Cook informed the board of supervisors.

"State parks is working full strength, CHP (California Highway Patrol) is providing additional manpower, and the county department of public works is cooperating."

'Try to enjoy the Fourth by making certain that whatever they do is safe and sane so we don't have any tragedies.'



SKETCH shows which streets will be closed to traffic and parking under restrictions in effect on the Fourth of July in Carmel.

Host families needed for exchange students

Host families are needed to provide housing for foreign exchange students who will attend Carmel High School in September.

American Field Service host family chairwoman Lucetta Merrill said there is only one host family that has agreed to open their home to an exchange student for the next school year.

"We are looking for warm and supportive families with the emotional and physical space to bring a special person into your lives," she said. "You will be rewarded with a lively, enthusiastic addition to your family."

Potential host families are encouraged to attend a special potluck and talent contest at 6 p.m., July 3 at the Church of the Wayfarer, west side of Lincoln Street between Seventh and Eighth Avenues.

The celebration is planned to honor a group of 42 foreign exchange students

More information on the host family program is available from Mrs. Merrill at 625-0804 or Gordon Clemens at 624-4922.

Woods School sale plans shelved while trustees consider lease offer

By MICHAEL R. GARDNER

A PLAN to demolish Woods School and sell the 2.8-acre site for about $1 million has been shelved temporarily while the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education ponders a last-minute proposal by a non-profit corporation to lease the facility for use as a private elementary school.

In a special meeting scheduled for 7 p.m., July 7, in Room 2 at Carmel High School, trustees are expected to hear a legal opinion from district counsel Dick Godino on whether they can lease the site without publicly advertising for other proposals and bids.

If Godino says the lease agreement can be signed, the board will have to decide whether a short-term lease could be more beneficial than an immediate sale.

Trustees, in an attempt to generate more income because of budget cutbacks, have approved a calendar that calls for the sale of Woods School and lease of Carmelo School by this fall.

However, a proposal presented to the board at its June 24 session by Alan and Rita Shugart to open a private school on the Woods School site has caused the board to reconsider its original decision.

The Shugarts have offered to pay the district $96,000 for a one-year lease. The school, tentatively named Briarcliff Academy, would serve 100 students in kindergarten through sixth grade.

Mrs. Shugart said the school would be non-denominational and would include a variety of subjects normally taught in public elementary schools, such as language arts, math, physical education, music and art.

Initially Briarcliff Academy would have about one teacher for every 15 students. Tuition costs would range from $1,500 to $2,500 per year, depending on the student's grade level, she said.

Long-time Carmel-area teacher and former Woods School Principal Gerald Traynor has been appointed headmaster of the school. Briarcliff also has a "number of commitments" from teachers, but Mrs. Shugart said she could not reveal their names. Traynor is on a one-year leave of absence from the Carmel school district.

Mrs. Shugart said they chose Carmel Woods because "it is in a central location for the children to reach. The board of education needs the money for the coming year. It is also one of the nicest schools and if you have a nice school you can attract more students." She said another location for the school will be found if Woods School cannot be leased.

Carmel Woods is in an unincorporated residential area on Dolores Street between First and Second avenues. When trustees originally began to ponder the future of the school, most area residents said they would like to keep it as a school or sell the property for residential use.

On the surface, the private school proposal appears to be a solution to the trustees' dilemma since the lease would generate revenue and would appease parents and area residents who want to keep the site as a school.

Meanwhile, the district could still advertise the property for sale and have a final agreement with a buyer when the one-year lease expires.

However, since the Shugarts want to open Briarcliff in early September, time is a key factor. And, there is some question whether the district must follow a lengthy bid process that would not be completed until September.

Under the state education code, school districts must advertise for bids when property is available for lease or sale. The bid advertisement and separate legal notice of intent to sell can be executed simultaneously but they require a 90-day period before the property can be leased or sold, said Supt. William Rand.

But another section of the education code, called the Civic Center Act, allows school districts to grant short-term rentals of school property.

Monterey County Deputy County Counsel Leroy Blankenship said that several schools in Southern California have used the Civic Center Act to lease school sites during the summer months.

Blankenship pointed out that the key to the Civic Center Act is a clause that says such short-term uses could not be granted "exclusively," which means Carmel would have to permit other agencies to rent the site if requested.

Rand was to meet with Blankenship and Godino this week to discuss the legalities of the lease process and will report his findings to trustees.

EVEN IF Carmel can legally lease Woods School without following the lengthy bid process, there is still the question whether trustees favor the proposal.

Because of legal problems and their belief that a sale would be more beneficial for the entire district, board President Ken White and Trustee Doyle Clayton opposed the lease proposal at the June 24 meeting. White and Clayton were the majority in a 2-1 vote to continue with the sale process while Trustee Barbara Sanford wanted to explore the lease option. Trustee Harold Santee abstained because, as a realtor, he said he faces a possible conflict of interest. Trustee Joan Cathey was absent.

After more lobbying by Sanford and some public protest, White and Clayton said they had not changed their minds, but were willing to allow district staff to meet with Blankenship and Godino to see if the lengthy bid process can be avoided.

"We're kind of in a holding pattern right now. I would like to look at it, but it still looks like selling the property is the best option," Clayton said after the meeting.

Clayton said the money raised by sale of Woods School would "save" the deferred maintenance program in the district, which now has a budget of about $35,000.

Under state law, school property that is sold can only be used for deferred maintenance expenses, unless trustees adopt a resolution that says there are no unmet needs in the program.

"There is no way we can do that," Clayton said. "A report on the high school says it will take $1 million if we keep it. We're going to look at the high school and middle school in September or October."

Clayton said even a one-year delay in the sale of the property will mean a loss of funds. "If you put it off for a year, it costs twice as much. There is more deterioration and more costs because of inflation," Clayton said.

The state has a special matching program that adds money to district deferred maintenance budgets. Business Manager Robert Zampatti said Carmel could receive a $34,000 matching grant under the state program if Woods School is sold and the funds are used for deferred maintenance.

Under its deferred maintenance program, the school district allocates funds to a special budget to pay for routine building and equipment repairs and replacement.

Zampatti said a formula to determine the amount of matching funds is changed every year, but there is a "good chance" that the program will continue despite current state budget cutbacks.

Clayton added that it is important to consider the interests of the entire district, instead of focusing on just the emotional aspects of the Carmel Woods School closure.

"They're looking at a single issue. We're looking at a multitude of issues over a long period of time," he said.

"WE HATE to see it closed although we also appreciate the current economic necessities," John Palshaw of Pebble Beach told trustees June 24. His two children attended Woods School last year. "I frankly wonder if Woods School is really surplus. In my view, it is an asset — an asset that can produce substantial funds while you have ownership of it."

His wife, Judy, said the decision to sell Woods School was "a mistake."

"Anybody can make a mistake. It's not too late. Once it's sold, it's too late," she said.

Charles Bromfield, president of the Bay School Board of Directors, said Carmel may need the school later. He echoed Palshaw's comments that there is a "baby boom" in Carmel and pointed out that kindergarten enrollment at Tularcitos and River Schools is much higher than expected.

Bob Heald, whose child attends Tularcitos said: "I don't have any emotional ties here. I just think the board is missing an opportunity. I think you have an opportunity here to make everyone happy."

Heald also questioned whether the surplus property advisory committee would have recommended that the school be sold as residential property if members had known that there is a market to lease Woods School.

Advisory committee chairman Leslie Leslie of Carmel Valley told the Pine Cone/ Outlook he wants the board to "definitely" consider the lease proposal.

"Absolutely. I believe the school board made a mistake in the first place by closing the elementary schools," Leslie said. "The biggest savings would have been the consolidation of the secondary schools.

I would definitely lease it for one year while they decide what to do with the secondary schools.

Leslie said the committee was told by realtors who attended the meetings that there is not a market to lease Woods School as a school. They told the committee there were other businesses interested, but that area residents wanted to see it remain a school or as residential property.

"As a committee, we were told that someone would not pay that kind of money for an educational institution," said Leslie.

White and Clayton said the committee recommended the sale of the school as part of their argument against the lease proposal.

Attorney Michael Stamp, who represented the Shugarts at the board meeting, told trustees June 24 they could continue with the sale process while Briarcliff leases the facility.

Stamp said the Shugarts are willing to pay "almost all" of the $96,000 immediately. "Were offering you something short, quick and easy," he said.

Stamp added that he believes the district will not be able to sell the property quickly and said the lease would provide income until a sale is negotiated.

"When I saw the proposal I thought it would help our financial problems. I personally would like to consider it. To me it makes sense economically," Mrs. Sanford said.

THE LEASE proposal came before the board during discussion of the calendar for the sale and lease of surplus property. The calendar is still vague because adminstrators can not predict when formal bids can be delivered and a final offer made.

In a report to trustees, the staff said appraiser Harold Seyferth has estimated that the 2.8 acre Woods School site is worth about $1.050 million. Or, trustees could split the property into nine individual lots with a total value of $787,500, Seyferth said.

Demolition of the school would cost the district between $24,000 and $70,000.

The staff report also indicates it will cost the district about $60,000 for deferred maintenance costs, energy conservation and other capital outlay items to prepare the site for sale.

Carmelo School, which is about five miles east of Highway 1 on Carmel Valley Road, could be leased for about $10,060 ($75 per square foot) per month, says a report from realtor John Mahoney.

The staff report says there have been 23 inquiries for the possible lease of that site since the proposal was advertised between May 2 and May 30.

Interested parties include representatives from a private school, office complex, retirement complex, research laboratory, community center, preschool, workshop, dog obedience school, athletic training facility, alcoholic treatment facility, trades service center and a computer demonstration school.

Trustees could lease the district office, one le east of Highway 1 on Carmel Valley Road, for $6,080 ($1 per sq. ft.) per month, Mahoney said.

Inquiries received so far have come from representatives for an office complex, a print shop and dental offices.

Architect Fred Keeble has estimated the cost to relocate the district office to available space at the Middle School at $100,000.

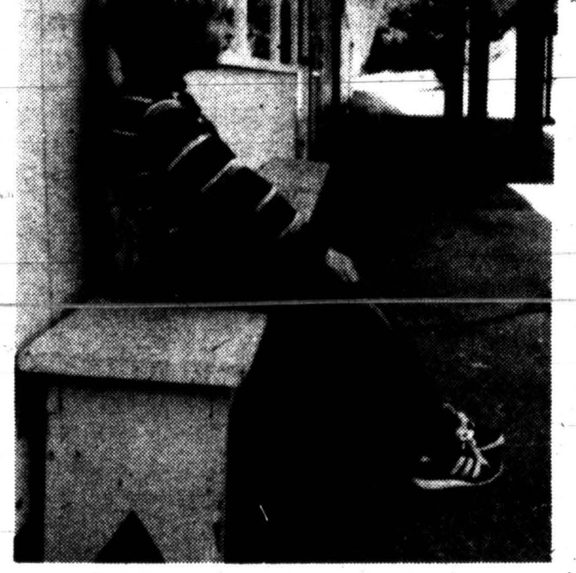
The lease of the district office is contingent upon a board decision on the future of the middle school and high school, which is expected in October.

In a related development, trustees have learned that the district's insurance carrier will pay the district $84,700 if trustees decide not to rebuild the Carmel High School ceramics building destroyed by fire last year.

Trustees asked Rand to investigate a possible time limit on the offer because they would prefer to postpone a decision on the insurance until a decision is made whether to close the high school or middle school because of declining enrollment.

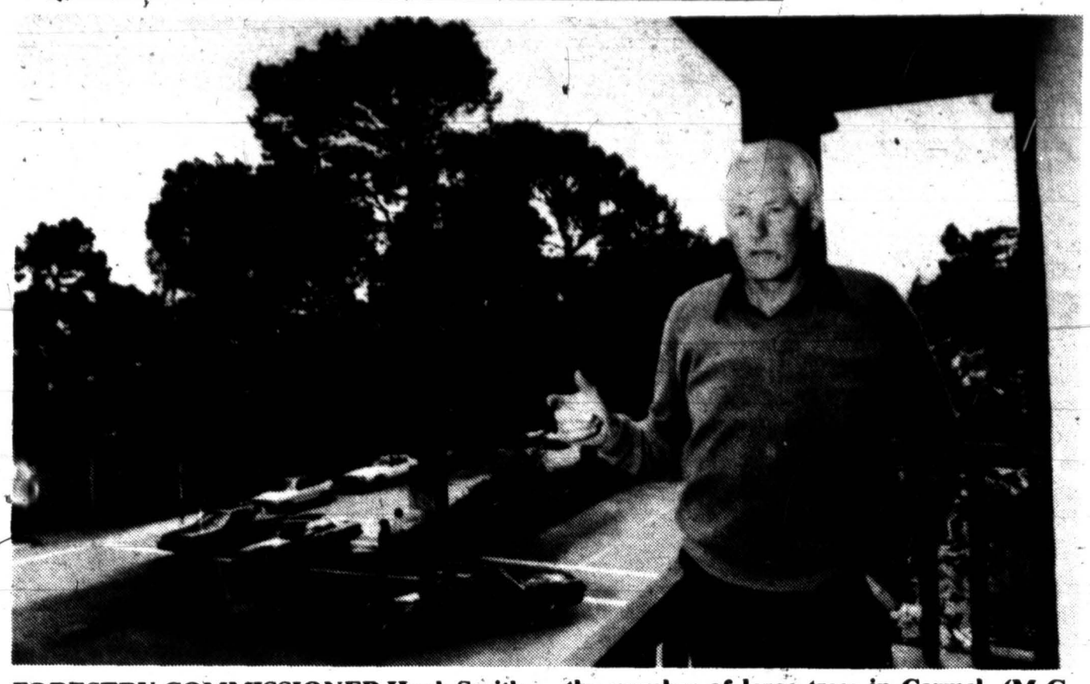
A fire destroyed the ceramics building in December 1981. Ceramics is now taught in Room 39 and new kilns were installed in back of the auto shop buildings.

In a report to trustees, district administators say the insurance carrier will pay $84,700 if they choose not to rebuild the facility. If trustees want to build a new site, the insurance company will pay the replacement cost of $110,000.



WILL CARMEL WOODS School be demolished or will it receive a new lease on life as a private educational institution? The Carmel Unified School District Board of Education is expected to answer that question when it meets at 7 p.m. July 7.

STUDENTS MAY once again attend school in Carmel Woods if a new lease proposal is approved by the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education when it meets at 7 p.m. July 7. (M.G. photos).



FORESTRY COMMISSIONER Hugh Smith is concerned over an apparent reduction in the number of large trees in Carmel. (M.G. photos).

Forestry commissioner says:

Carmel urban forest future is threatened

By MICHAEL R. GARDNER

IS THE Carmel urban forest doomed?

Carmel Forestry Commissioner Hugh Smith believes that the population of tall Monterey pines in the city is threatened by increased development, looser controls by the Coastal Commission and a trend toward smaller trees on private residential property.

Smith said the growth of young, "second-story" trees is stifled by development in the commercial district of Carmel.

"When they plant a new pine tree, it seems to grow smaller," Smith said. "The roots can't get air and moisture because of the cement. In the native forest, like in Pebble Beach, you can see how tall and bushy they grow when not threatened by man."

Smith said the older pines have reached the end of their life span and the younger ones will not grow large enough to replace the loss of the second-story trees, which grow to heights of 40 to 60 feet.

"Parks and city rights-of-way provide space for reproduction provided that power lines are not in the way but packed soil of sidewalks and blacktop-covered streets inhibit normal development. Residential property is the home of most of the future forest," Smith said.

However, a trend toward the removal of large trees in favor of smaller ones also threatens the future of large numbers of Monterey pines in the village, he said.

To the question whether the urban forest is doomed, Smith replied:

"Not at all. It's in good shape. And it has good potential to continue with upper story trees if residents can be encouraged to keep Monterey Pines to the end of their mature life span and to replace them once they've been removed."

Smith said he has received "many" requests from people who want to employ his tree surgeon business to remove perfectly healthy second-story pine trees.

There is a trend toward the smaller trees because they do not block out views or the sun and do not lose as many leaves, Smith said.

The city of Carmel only restricts tree removal in new developments, on vacant lots, or when a house is being remodeled.

Restrictions on the removal of trees in residential areas is under the authority of the Coastal Commission office in Santa Cruz. However, the staff apparently will loosen controls because of budget reductions.

City Forester Greg D'Ambrosio said he received a telephone call last week that indicates the Coastal Commission staff will reduce on-site visits when an application for tree removal is submitted.

D'Ambrosio, however, does not believe the Coastal Commission's review process is adequate. "I don't see the sense of the Coastal Commission review process. I think it is a waste of time for us and the residents applying for the permit."

Coastal Planner Kathy Terry said financial cutbacks have forced the staff to reduce site reviews on tree removal applications. She said a site visit will probably only be required if the tree has been damaged or if it is in the view area between a residence or street and the ocean.

"We are reviewing all requests for tree removal. It is rare that we do require a full-blown permit," she said. "We do require a permit if it is in the view area of the ocean or is on a vacant lot."

A replacement tree must also be planted, although that tree does not necessarily have to be of the same variety or planted in the same area as the original, Terry said.

The Coastal Commission staff reviews about one tree removal application per week. Ninety percent of the applications are routinely approved without a site visit.

BECAUSE OF the apparent reduction in the population of large trees, the Carmel Forestry Commission has ordered a new city-wide tree population study in addition to its annual survey of the urban forest. And commissioners will also explore development of a new $1,000 tree giveaway program based on results of that study, D'Ambrosio said.

D'Ambrosio said tree growth is stifled in the downtown district, but that a new giveaway program could help maintain the urban forest in the residential zone.

The study is expected to begin after July 4 and will be completed in September, he said.

A plan to help maintain the second-story tree population will probably be adopted before the winter planting season which begins in March, D'Ambrosio said.

A LARGE, "second story" tree towers over the downtown commercial district and shadows a younger tree planted along the sidewalk on Ocean Avenue. The population of large Monterey pines has slowly dwindled and city officials want to adopt a new program that would encourage more second story trees in the residential zones.

The plan most likely to be adopted by the city would provide about 25 tall second-story trees free to city of Carmel residents on a first-come, first-served basis, D'Ambrosio said.

The trees would be in five or 15 gallon containers and at the time of the giveaway, they would probably be three to five feet tall, he said. The trees are expected to grow to between 40 and 60 feet within 20 to 40 years, depending on the variety.

D'Ambrosio said there are six varieties of trees under consideration for the proposed giveaway program: Monterey pine, Monterey cypress, bishop pine, torrey pine, coast redwood and deordra cedar.

D'Ambrosio added that the proposed giveaway program will be in addition to the 22-year-old city project in which free trees are distributed around Christmas.

"It would be a supplement to the bare root tree seedling program at Christmas," he said. "But these trees will be for city residents only. In the past, with our other program, we have had problems with the trees being taken outside the city limits."

D'Ambrosio said he does not expect the forestry commission to consider a final program until results of the tree survey are completed. The city council must approve funds for the program.

Although the council has not officially acted on the program, it was discussed briefly during the June 24 special budget hearings.

City Administrator Doug Peterson said the council has allocated $1,000 for the proposed program in the 1982-83 budget.

"I'm kind of where the forestry commission is. I'd like to see us get a program together that encourages people to voluntarily plant the larger trees," said Peterson.

Peterson added: "I think there is a large enough distinction that this program will help all the citizens of Carmel although it does have a private benefit," he said.

COUNCILMAN and former forestry commissioner David Maradei agrees that a program is necessary.

"On city property we don't have to worry about it, but on private property there is a tendency to plant smaller, more ornate trees," Maradei said.

A trend toward smaller trees means that there are not enough replacements for the older and larger trees that die or are removed by private property owners, Maradei said.

Smith added that the larger, upper story, Monterey pines are part of the heritage and charm of Carmel.

"Our forest is a dynamic, living and changing thing. At the turn of the century, there were almost no trees in the west part of town or on the Carmel Point, but our community was essentially injected into an existing forest in much of the remainder of Carmel," he said.

"The upper story was already established, and a tall pine only took space in a garden required by its trunk and root system. These trees are completing their normal span of 60 to 90 years and are phasing out."

Smith said that as a tree surgeon, he believes that "sunshine, views and freedom from hazard are vital property values, but when a tree is not violating one of these values, I will miss it if it goes. It hurts to be an agent in the loss of a majestic and harmless friend."

Frank Devendorf, an early Carmel developer, was instrumental in the planting of most of the Monterey pines that grace Ocean Avenue and along the Carmel beach front. The tree program began in 1904.

After LAFCO approval

Hearing on annexation scheduled for July 26

"I WONDER why the representatives from Carmel Woods leave immediately after their annexation is settled and don't stay to go through the budget with us."

Carmel City Councilman Robert Stephenson's ire was evident during a special council meeting June 24 to consider the 1982-83 budget and proposed annexation of Carmel Woods to Carmel-by-the-Sea.

What triggered his outburst was the fact that several Carmel Woods residents who favor annexation remained at the meeting only until the council set a July 26 date for a protest on the annexation, which has been approved by the Local Agency Formation Commission.

The Carmel Woods annexation proponents did not, however, remain for the budget discussions which followed consideration of the protest hearing date.

The petition submitted by Carmel Woods residents for annexation gave three reasons, one of which was that "annexation would facilitate participation in the political process," according to a report by LAFCO Executive Director Michael Johnson.

Mayor Charlotte Townsend agreed with Councilman Stephenson. "Good question," she said. Stephenson is the only member of the council who has consistently opposed the Carmel Woods annexation.

"It looks like it's being forced on us without our say-so," Stephenson remarked before the council set the July 26 date for the protest hearing.

Since the annexation has been approved by LAFCO, it will take effect unless 25 percent or more of the 934 registered voters in the Carmel Woods area oppose annexation at the protest hearing. If 25 to 50 percent of the residents protest, the matter will be decided by Carmel Woods voters in the Nov. 2 election.

If more than 50 percent protest, annexation fails. If fewer than 25 percent protest, annexation is automatically approved.

Monterey County Registrar of Voters Ross Underwood said the total number of registered voters in the unincorporated Carmel Woods area may be reduced slightly by state-mandated purge procedures.

About 4,000 sample ballots which were mailed to registered voters before the June 8 election have been determined to be undeliverable, Underwood said. That represents about 3.4 percent of all registered voters in the county.

Half of those were for registered voters who had moved within the county and who will be re-registered; the other half represent voters who have moved out of the state or who have died and whose names must be removed from the rolls of registered voters, Underwood said.

IF THE SAME percentage of registered voters is purged in the Carmel Woods area as in the rest of Monterey County, the result would be about 14 names, Underwood noted.

"My guess is that the percentage of names that will be purged is not in an equal ratio to the rest of the county," Underwood said.

Some opponents of annexation have stated that the process is unfairly weighted in favor of annexation because of the existence on voter registration lists of "deadwood" voters who should be purged.

The presence of these names, opponents have argued, makes defeat of annexation more difficult by requiring an inequitable number of signatures to be collected on protest petitions.

LAFCO staff has estimated that the population of Carmel Woods is 2,802, and that annexation would generate between $52,173 and $261,595 annually in state subventions to Carmel from gasoline and in-lieu motor vehicle taxes.

In addition, Carmel would receive $51,108 as its share of the total $169,616 annual property tax revenue from Carmel Woods, under a revenue allocation formula agreed upon by both the city and county.

Although no estimate of the cost to Carmel-by-the-Sea to provide services to the Carmel Woods area has been prepared, these service impacts were identified by LAFCO:

• Land use planning would shift to the city of Carmel; timesharing uses permitted by the county would probably be eliminated; tree protection regulations in Carmel would probably be extended to the 170-acre area.

• Public works duties, such as road maintenance resurfacing, drainage control and other responsibilities, would be transferred to the city.

• Police protection in the area, with "a very low incident profile," would be transferred to Carmel.

• Fire protection service could be provided by the city of Carmel directly from existing fire department personnel and equipment, or could augment those services by contracting for additional services from the California Department of Forestry, according to the LAFCO analysis. In either case, "the response times for fire service should be approximately the same after annexation as before annexation."

• Sanitary services would be provided to all properties in the area annexed by the Carmel Sanitary District, except for 12 lots of record not within the district boundary, LAFCO said. Owners of those 12 parcels would have to negotiate with the sanitary district for services.

ONE DIRECT benefit to Carmel Woods residents which would result from annexation is a reduction in the cost of residential garbage collection, according to the LAFCO analysis.

The Carmel Woods annexation proponents did not, however, remain for the budget discussions which followed consideration of the protest hearing date.

LAFCO staff estimated that Monterey County Fire Protection Service Area 43, which contracts with the state forestry department for fire services for the Carmel Woods and other county areas, would lose about $45,000 per year if annexation succeeds.

Since the area proposed for annexation would come under jurisdiction of a Carmel ordinance which regulates refuse collection fees charged by the John Roscelli Corp., costs would be lower after annexation.

For example, residents of Carmel pay $4.40 per month for one garbage can, $6.80 for two cans, and $9.20 for three cans. County residents in the Carmel Woods area now pay $5.25 per month for one garbage can, $7.95 for two cans, and $9.85 for three cans.

To blunt the impact of this revenue loss upon the service area, Monterey County Fire Warden Tom Perkins has suggested that the city of Carmel consider contracting with CSA 43 for additional fire services to augment those it could provide through its own fire department.

Another way to lessen the impact of the revenue loss upon the service area would be to impose a user fee upon those property owners still within CSA 43 after annexation passes, the LAFCO analysis suggested.

In its recommendation for approval of annexation, here is what the LAFCO staff said:

"Annexation (of Carmel Woods) would allow residents and landowners to have a voice in the direction of their community. As it stands today, the direction of the city of Carmel is decided without the voice or political participation of those residents and landowners who reside within unincorporated Carmel.

"The city council establishes the goals and objectives of the city, including the types and level of governmental services and land use decisions without formal consideration or participation from all those that are affected. Upon annexation, the landowners and resident voters will have full participation in the decisions affecting their community."

Footrace to benefit youth center

A FIVE-MILE footrace sponsored by The Crossroads at Highway 1 and Rio Road in Carmel will be run at 9 a.m. July 10. Proceeds from the race will benefit activities at the Carmel Youth Center. All entries must be received by July 1 at the main office of The Crossroads, just south of Wells Fargo bank. Entry fee is $7, including a tee shirt, or $4 without the tee shirt. The public is invited to attend the free race, which will begin at The Crossroads and follow a route near the Odello artichoke fields and Carmel Meadows. The first male finisher will receive a dinner for two at Billy Quon's; first female finisher will receive a $50 certificate from the Baobab Collection; first five women finishers will receive totebags from Carmel Mercantile; the oldest man and woman finisher will receive a gift certificate from The Collection; and all finishers will receive a ribbon. Immediately after the race, there will be drawings for prizes donated by merchants at The Crossroads. All runners will receive a free drink and bagels from The Bagel Bakery and croissants from Monterey Baking Company. Above, three of the organizers ham it up as they get ready for the big race (from left): Phil Cherry, assistant director of the Carmel Youth Center; Jan Michelson, manager of The Crossroads; and Howard Brunn, owner of Carmel Mercantile. Teenage game program continues this summer

A SPECIAL program for high school students designed to improve communication skills and build self-esteem will continue through the summer at Carmel High School.

Sponsored by the Parents Who Care organization, the NEAT (New Experiences, Affection and Trust) family program meets at 7 p.m. every Monday in the high school music room.

The program employs a number of non-competitive games designed so there are no "losers," but so that students can learn to communicate better. Although the program is for all students, it is especially designed for those students who do not participate in other types of competitive group activities, said Hans Doelman, a Carmel parent who assists with the program.

The NEAT family was actually started at Carmel High School before Prop. 13-inspired budgetary retrenchments forced the dismissal of a staff counselor. Doelman got involved with Parents Who Care — a volunteer parent organization concerned about teenage drug and alcohol use. He saw a need for the program, and reorganized it last fall.

Doelman is uniquely qualified to understand the feelings of isolation which sometimes overwhelm teenagers, both as the parent of three sons who have attended Carmel High School and as a former Carmel High School student who was looked upon as an outsider because of his Dutch nationality.

"When I came here as a foreigner, I felt very ill-at-ease," Doelman said. He was born of Dutch parents and came to Carmel from Java.

"The NEAT family was discontinued because of a lack of counselors at the high school. I took it upon myself to continue it and to set up the meeting times. The games we use were originally set up in Concord to identify the areas where kids have trouble, particularly in the area of self-image which causes communication problems."

Some of the "norms" (a rhetorical substitute for "rules") employed by the group, according to Doelman, are:

- No "put-downs" are allowed.
- Students may decide not to participate in a game if they feel threatened.
- Only one person may speak at a time; participants must actively listen to each other.
- Statements must be couched in terms of "I" instead of "you," to avoid judgmental attitudes.

"From the efforts of Parents Who Care we know there's a problem with drugs," Doelman said. "This is a way for kids to get a natural 'high' without drugs. Kids come because they've heard about the program and they're interested. But a lot of kids who could use the program don't come."

Doelman said the number of participants ranges from 20 to six or seven, but there are a handful of students who have come over a long period of time. All students of high school age are welcome to participate during the summer months, he added.

Committee ponders wording of small space ordinance

JUST WHEN it appeared the Carmel Planning Commission would finally complete its review of the proposed small space ordinance, a new wrinkle has forced the issue back to its land use committee for more discussion.

The problem is how to word the proposed ordinance to regulate concessions that rent spaces within a larger store. The question of how to control concessions has been raised by Steve Jacobs, managing partner of Carmel Plaza.

Because of the concerns raised by Jacobs, planners sent the proposed ordinance back to its land use committee for study. That group is expected to present a proposal to the commissioners when they meet July 21.

Jacobs, in a telegram read to commissioners at their June 16 session, said the proposed small space ordinance does not control concessions from doing business inside a larger store.

Jacobs said he is not opposed to concessions as partnerships in a single store, but he believes those businesses should be regulated by the city.

Commissioners agreed with his proposal and sent the issue back to its land use committee.

The panel has grappled with a small space ordinance for several months. The ordinance is expected to regulate "merchandise marts" — also known as "mini-marts" — which result from the subdivision of a large retail space into smaller spaces.

A moratorium on the development of new merchandise marts is in effect in Carmel until a small space ordinance is adopted.

The moratorium was enacted by the city council April 6, 1981, after the development of Paradise, a merchandise mart owned by Paul Laub on the northeast corner of Ocean Avenue and Dolores Street. The moratorium has been extended to April 5, 1983.

Council members, when they adopted the moratorium, said they were concerned about a proliferation of merchandise marts and also questioned the esthetic values of the Paradise building.

JACOBS, who has been active in the development of the small space ordinance, added that he is not opposed to other provisions included in the regulations.

"I wish to strongly endorse the city ordinance before the planning commission today," the telegram read.

"The concise simplicity of this ordinance directly addresses and resolves all but one of the problems involved in bringing merchandise marts under the review and control of the planning commission."

Commissioners sent the proposed ordinance back to the land use committee without comment.

City Atty. George Brehmer suggested several language changes to clear some legal technicalities, but did not propose major additions.

The proposed ordinance defines a merchandise mart as "a building designed or proposed to be used in such a manner as to allow two or more business locations within a structure and wherein the entry to each business is gained through the interior of the structure rather than through an exterior door."

The proposed ordinance says a merchandise mart must provide 5 percent open space for each business. If there are six businesses, there would have to be 30 percent open space. Four percent of that open space would be reserved for landscaping.

Under the proposed ordinance, each business would have to be separated from the open space and each other by permanent walls, doors, ceilings and windows.

The merchandise marts would also be subject to design review and approval of the commission.

The ordinance will be go to the city council for final adoption.

THE DEVELOPMENT of Paradise Mall, northeast corner of Ocean Avenue and Dolores Street, prompted calls for an ordinance to limit mini-marts. After months of discussion, the planning commission will hear a proposed ordinance when it meets July 21. (Michael R. Gardner photo).

State budget offers no miracles for Carmel Unified School District

A NEW state budget has not provided any last minute miracles for the Carmel Unified School District.

When trustees begin another round of budget talks in August, there will be little new money provided by the state budget, which is expected to be signed by Gov. Jerry Brown this week.

The state budget allows for a 6.93 percent increase in "average daily attendance" (ADA) subventions to local school districts. The state provides monies to districts based on the average number of students who attend its schools.

In fiscal year 1981-82, Carmel received $1,910 per student, which will increase to $2,034 for 1982-83, said Assemblyman Sam Farr (D-Carmel). The ADA increase will mean an additional $30,000 for Carmel.

The new state budget does not include provisions for a "deflator clause" that would have reduced subventions to schools by 16 percent, which would have meant a $248,000 reduction in the Carmel district.

A joint conference committee had recommended that the legislature either raise taxes or cut subventions to balance the budget. As of Tuesday morning, the legislature had refused to cut subventions and a tax proposal appeared to be stalled in the Assembly Ways and Means Committee.

There were two partisan measures in committee hearings that could mean additional monies for Carmel, Farr said.

The measure sponsored by the Democrats calls for a $300 million increase in oil taxes that would be allocated to districts through an increase in ADA subventions.

Another measure, this one sponsored by the Republicans, calls for a $50 million cut in other programs to fund schools that fall under a complex state formula called a "102 percent guarantee."

Under the formula, certain schools that meet specific requirements on declining enrollment and loss of other funds, would receive 100 percent of its state subvention plus an additional percent.

CVPOA wants vote on all water projects

If Monterey Peninsula voters are asked to vote on Carmel River water plans they should vote on all alternatives — not just a dam — the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association Board of Directors has decided.

The board reacted to a Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board proposal made June 7 that the issue of a dam be put on the November ballot. The CVPOA board authorized its president, Richard Dalsemer, to put its position in a letter to the water management board.

It passed a resolution which says: "It is inappropriate now to put only one alternative (a dam) on the ballot. We recommend that the water management board supply all appropriate information on all alternatives to the public and that all of these alternatives be placed on the ballot."

The board also opposed exclusion of the Odello property from the Carmel Valley Master Plan, as recently proposed by county planning staff. The CVPOA board said the High Meadow area should not be excluded also if it is to be connected to Carmel Valley Road through Outlook Drive. It authorized CVPOA President Dalsemer to express its opposition to the Monterey County Planning Commission.

Karin Strasser-Kauffman, chairwoman of a CVPOA volunteer committee named to beautify the median strip on lower Carmel Valley Road, reported that a landscape plan is about to be prepared which makes suggestions for planting native shrubs.

Carmel Barracudas

By DEE DEE HICKS

THE CARMEL Barracudas recieved an expected loss against the Gilroy Gators this Saturday, with a final meet score of 671-517.

Brad Gordon (9-10 age group) again achieved a perfect meet record, earning five first places for five events. Brad has placed first in every event he has participated in this summer. Closely behind Brad, and recieving four first place ribbons, was his sister Melissa, the second high scorer of the day. Melissa swims in the eight and under age group.

Recieving three first place ribbons each were Nathan Stiles (6-under), Norman Rial (9-10), Thais Treanor and Jenny Wolf (13-14), and Sarah Hicks (15-18).

Sean Mullen (15-18) broke a team record held since 1980. His first place breast stroke was recorded at 1:04.24; breaking Andy Sigurthsson's record of 1:05.11. Sean's time also qualifies as a PAR (Pacific Association Recordable Time), being lower than the official PAR of 1:04.50. Sean also recieved a first in the 200 I.M. (with teammates Jamie Olsen, David Sandstrom, and Mark Reardon to finish second in that event.

Mark placed first in the boys 15-18 100 Butterfly event, coming very close to breaking a minute with a 1:00.63; and he came in second in the 100 breast stroke. He and teammates Paul Gaske, Mike La Fontaine, and David Sandstrom recieved a first place finish in the 400 free relay with a time of 3:37.13. The 15-18 boys made a very strong showing in all free style events, recieving firsts for the 400 free relay, as mentioned above; in Paul Gaske's 100 free style (:54.73), and Mike LaFontaine's 50 free (time-:23.06). Paul also earned a third place in the 50 free with a personal best time of :24.76, and David Sandstrom swam to a second place finish in the 100 free. Second place finishes were also clocked by Jamie Olson for his 100 Butterfly and his 100 Backstroke, and by Deano Lindsay for his 200 I.M.

The 15 to 18 girls' medley relay team of Stacey Wester, Lisa Paik, and Shiela Mullen, and Sarah Hicks, swam to an easy first place finish with an eight second lead over the Gilroy girls and took the race with a 2:14.64. Sarah Hicks also earned first places for her 100 free style (:58.44) and the 200 I.M. (2:34.08). She swam to second in the 100 Back, and, along with teammates Stacey Wester, Shiela Mullen, and Beth Boyd, came in second in the 200 free relay.

Other second place finishes earned by the 15 to 18 girls included Lisa Paik in the 100 fly, and Stacey Wester in the 100 free, the 50 free, and the 100 breast. Shiela Mullen, with a time of 1:21.83, earned first place in the 100 breast stroke event. Third place ribbons were awarded to Lisa Paik for the 100 breast and the 200 I.M.; to Sheila Mullens for the 50 free; and to Beth Boyd for the 100 Back.

The 13 to 14 boys' relay teams (consisting of Jim Sandstrom, Brian Mullen, Mike Sandstrom, and Scott Nybakken) came in second in both the 200 Medley relay and the 200 free relay. Brian Mullen recieved third place ribbons for his 50 free and his 100 breast; as did Jim Sandstrom for the 100 back,and Mike Sandstrom for the 100 butterfly.

THAIS TREANOR and Jenny Wolf each earned two first place finishes for individual events (Thais for the 50 free race at :29.19, and the 100 back at 1:15.13; and Jenny for the 100 breast with a time of 1:15.81, and the 200 I.M. with a time of 2:36.92). Trina Clayton and Emily Banks joined the girls to come in first in the 200 free relay event with a time of 1:54.04.

These four girls also came in second in the 200 medley relay. Trina Clayton also recieved a second for her 100 back, as did Emily Banks in the 50 breast and the 200 I.M. Emily was particularly pleased with her 50 breast time of 1:17.43, as it represents a two second drop over her previous lifetime best in this event. Thais earned a second in the 100 free and Jenny recieved a second in the 100 butterfly. Emily Banks placed third in the fly.

The 11 to 12 boys team of Jeff Lewis, Matt Slautterback, Laurence Boone, and Joey Davie swam to a first place finish in the 200 free relay with a time of 2:38.01, and the same team placed second in the 200 medley relay. Jeff Lewis earned a first with his 100 free time of 1:04.36, and second places in the 50 breast and the 100 I.M.

CARMEL BARRACUDA swimmers gave themselves the team "good luck" sign before their successful first place finish in the eight-and under girls' medley relay race in Gilroy last Saturday. The swimmers are (from left) Livia Peterson, Melissa Gordon, Courtney Slautterback and Danielle Boebel. (Photo by Joan Brophy).

Hailey Franke, Melinda Harber, Donna Wolf, and Tanna Franke swam in the second place finishing 200 medley relay; while Hailey, Melinda, Tanna, and Tory Wester also recieved a second in the 200 free relay. Hailey Franke received three th -d place ribbons (100 free, 50 free, 50 fly), while Tanna Franke won a second place finish in the 50 butterfly.

Brad Gordon's sweep in the nine to 10 boys' age group included a 1:10.55 in the 100 freestyle, a :38.18 in the 50 butterfly, a :39.54 in the 50 back, and a 1:20.59 in the 100 I.M. He also swam fly in the 200 medley relay, placing first with teammates Norman Rial, Andy Doud, and Bryan Langley. The boys earned a time of 2:54.34 in that event.

The nine to 10 boys team of Matt Olin, Norman Rial, Andy Doud, and Bryan Langley placed first with a time of 2:36.94 in the 200 free relay. Norman Rial also recieved a first place for the 50 breast (:40.18), a second spot in the 50 back, and a third in the 100 I.M. Matt Olin won third place finishes in the 50 fly and 50 breast; and Bryan Langley swam to a second place finish in the 50 free style event.

The nine-10 girls relay team of Jiffy Fry, Meredith Smith, Leslis Sincoff, and Crissy Mullen came in second in both the 200 medley relay and the 200 free relay. Jiffy Fry also recieved a second in her 50 breast event. She showed excellent strategy in that race, keeping a reserve of strength until the last several strokes when she was able to pull ahead and touch out the Gilroy swimmer who came in third.

The eight-and-up boys medley relay team of Tim Lewis, Matt Smith, Nathan Stiles, and Jeff McGowan clocked a first place finish of 1:58.46; awarding the boys in this age group their first blue ribbon in a relay event this season. Tim Lewis also recieved third place ribbons in the 25 free and the 25 breast, as did Jeff McGowan in the 25 back. Nathan Stiles earned first place finishes in both six-and-up events; scoring a :20.06 for his 25 free and a :30.55 for his 25 back. Micah Lande swam to second place finishes in both those events.

The eight-and-up girls won both their relay events last Saturday, with a 1:37.11 in the medley relay and a 1:35.17 in the free relay. Melissa Gordon, Daniella Boebel, Courtney Slautterback, and Livia Peterson made up the medley relay; while Erica Murray joined Melissa, Daniella, and Courtney for the Free Relay. Melissa Gordon picked up two other first places (50 free, :41.44; 25 fly, :18.54) and a second (in the 100 I.M.). Livia Peterson took home a blue ribbon for her 25 back (:28.67).

Other second place finishes in this age group were earned by Daniella Boebel (25 breast), Amy Allard (25 free), and Peyton Lewis (25 back). Courtney Slautterback placed third in the 25 free style, the 25 breast stroke, and the 100 I.M., as did Amy Doud in the 25 back. Sarah Fry was the only participating six-and-up girl for the Carmel team this week, and she won a third place ribbon for her participation in the 25 free style event in her age group.

Other Barracudas who participated in the meet were Rachel Lippman, Mark Brophy, Cassie Brophy, Sara Kew (who swam in her first 'A' heat last Saturday), Roger Newton, Amelia Boebel, Cindy Powers, Cynthia Triner, Mimi Cea, Erica Olin, Scott Murray, Greg Lippman, Mary McCormick, Colin Wozencraft, Colin Brophy, Ali Voskay, and Brady Lindsay. The next meet for the Barracudas will be at Watsonville on July 10. There will be no meet over the weekend of July 4.

We Speak Color

M'Lady Bruhn (Ocean and San Carlos) is excited over the new language they are speaking! The language of "color." ("We speak color")!

Not only have each of the sales associates been "draped" and well informed as to each season's color choices — but there are "color boards" within the store. Customers were invited in on Tuesday to have color professionals show what season each represents — and the most flattering colors they can wear.

The emphasis on color and those co-ordinated for each season will be featured in Pat Flannery's selections for fall.

Jones For Fall is already in the store and many surprises are due to arrive in addition to the favorite Joanie Char dresses, and Stanley Blacker classic separates featured by the store.*

Carmel Youth Baseball

By WENDY BANKS

CARMEL YOUTH Softball has come to the end of the regular season. In the minor league Herma Smith Curtis won three in a row by wide margins.

They began by taking on Fort Ord. Suzanne Suwada and Jamie Parrish shared the pitching honors and both hit well; Jamie scored a home run. Other leading hitters were: Gina Palumbo, Nancy Penn, Sandra Harris, and Valerie Wester. Doing a fine job on defense, the HSC infield tagged out several girls in military uniforms; final score was 27-4.

The same Herma Smith Curtis combination won their next game 12-3 with Lisa Miller adding a home run. Catcher Jackie Gardner threw to second baseman Lisa Miller to tag the runner out. Danielle Hayman, Suzanne Suwada, and Jamie Parrish all had good days in the field. In an earlier game the final score was Herma Smith Curtis 21, ELA 2.

Suzanne Suwada pitched the win and hit a homer. Doubles in that game came off the bats of Gina Palumbo, Sandra Harris, Jackie Gardner, and Danielle Hayman. Jamie Parrish made all three outs in the first inning when she played shortstop.

When Village Inn, playing in the girls' softball major league, met Marina the final outcome was 13-8 in favor of our local girls. Stacey White pitched a great game and gave up only two walks in seven innings. Village Inn exploded in the first inning when they scored six runs and never gave up the lead. Amy Fuller had a big day on first base and Karla Palumbo added two doubles.

After La Playa had established itself in first place in the Bronco league, the remaining four teams played in a round robin to establish who would be the second team to play out in Carmel Valley on July 4. In the first game Derek Rayne defeated Pine Inn 9-3. Brett Ledbetter was the winning pitcher with help from teammate Shawn Edwards who doubled and drove home two runs in the second inning to put Derek Rayne on the scoreboard.

A line drive by David Faber was caught by shortstop Steve Szaszy who executed a double play in getting Darren Read out at second. Adam Mohr caught two line drives in the top of the third and ended up being involved in five outs in the first three innings. Going two for four were DR's Brett Ledbetter, Eric Mahlum, and Shawn Edwards; PI's Adam Green did the same.

In the second and closest game, heads-up base running made for an exciting game between John Roscelli and Nielsen Market. Josh Banks stole home and then Christian Sutton came home on a wild pitch to tie the game in the fifth inning. Josh, backing up third, made a spectacular throw to first for the third out. Doubles were collected by Ali Monroe (JR) and Josh Banks (NM). Bobby Carroll was the winning pitcher. The final score read NM 14, JR 13.

The two round-robin winners then met for the deciding game. Although Derek Rayne took an early lead, Nielsen Market came back in the last inning to apply a little extra pressure. In this tight defensive game, two fielders named Christian, Christian Commings and Christian Braudrick, made important catches in the outfield for DR. Steve Szsazy scored three runs for DR as did Josh Banks for NM, the latter all unearned. The only extra base hit was NM's Paul Tarantino who hit a double. Cory Keith helped pitch the win for Derek Rayne 12-8.

Carmel Valley Little League

By MERRY NOLTE

Carmel Valley Little League will climax its season with the annual Fourth of July celebration of baseball and a community barbecue this Sunday at the ballpark, off Paso Hondo in the Carmel Valley Village.

Beginning the day at 10 a.m. will be a minor league All-Star game. Four players from each of the seven teams in the league are to be selected by their coaches to play a six inning exhibition game.

The Carmel Youth Baseball game second-placed team will meet the Valley runner-up in the second game of the day. The Carmel and Carmel Valley champions will face each other in the final game, which is to begin at approximately 3 p.m.

The barbecue will be served from noon to midafternoon, with a choice of a steak dinner for $6 or a hamburger dinner for $3. Both dinners will include salad, beans, corn on the cob, and bread. Barbecue tickets will be available at the ballpark.

Also scheduled to run concurrently with the other events are a raffle and silent auction.

TOURNAMENT PLAY

Carmel Valley will be host to the first district playoff game at 5:30 p.m., Tuesday, July 6. The Valley champion will play the winner from the Hartnell league in a single-elimination tournament. The winner will go on further district play in Salinas.

An All-Star team of nine and 10-year-olds from the major league teams will play in an invitational tournament at Washington Park in Pacific Grove on Wednesday, July 7.

MINOR LEAGUE

Valley Hardware's Wolfpack remains undefeated, with a victory this week over the Grapevine Deli Broncos, 16-13. Garrett Morris and Lance Welch both hit triples for the Wolfpack, and Kristi Nichols tripled for the Broncos.

The Kurz Instrument Pirates downed the Murphy Lumber Hornets, 12-6. Darcie Largent, Anna Otis, and Danny Kurz all had triples for the Pirates. Phil Garnero tripled and doubled for the Hornets.

MAJOR LEAGUE

The Wills Fargo Tigers moved within a half game of first place for the second half with a victory over the previously-unbeaten Texaco Lions, 10-1.

Leading hitters for the Tigers were Jim Courtney, with two doubles, and Jim Panetta and Derik Estes, both with a double and a single. Dan Lind also doubled for the Tigers. Chris Nolte homered for the Lions, to account for their only run. Pitchers for the Tigers were Dan Lind, Jason Watts, and Jim Courtney.

The Running Iron Wildcats improved their record to 3-3 for the second half with a victory over the Kiwanis Indians, 20-5. Greg Lallas was four for four in the game, including a double and an inside-the-park homerun.

Ned McGowan and Caley Inlow also hit doubles for the Wildcats. Scott Wiesner had two hits for the Indians, including a double. Pitching for the Wildcats were Davin Gardner and Greg Lallas.

CARMEL YOUTH BASEBALL teams for older boys have had an active game schedule so far this summer. Colt division teams, for boys 15 to 16 years old, are midway through the season while Pony division teams, for boys from 13 to 14 years old, end their season on July 3. The Colt I team is sponsored by Carmel Valley Disposal; Colt II is sponsored by Cambridge International. Pony teams and their sponsors are: Tigers, Carmel Kiwanis; Mets, Carmel Rotary; Lions, Carmel Lions; Padres, Friar Tuck's Restaurant; Athletics, Barnyard merchants. (Photos by Roger Fremier).

MOHAMMED ALI Sardar repairs rugs that are sent to Conway of Asia from throughout the United States

A YOUNG Mohammed Rahim (foreground) traveled on the back of a donkey in his native Afghanistan.

Carmel rug expert is refugee from Russian invasion of Afghanistan

By MICHAEL GARDNER

MOHAMMED ALI Sardar sits peacefully in a back corner of the Carmel import shop, Conway of Asia. His nimble fingers pull strands of multi-colored thread through the intricately designed, hand-woven rug badly in need of expert repair. Every so often, a browsing tourist will ask for a photograph. Sardar smiles.

But life has not always been this tranquil for the 22-year-old Sardar, who was forced to flee his Afghanistan homeland in the wake of the Soviet Union invasion in late December of 1979.

His path to freedom took Sardar on a treacherous six-day hike through the mountain ranges to Pakistan, then back to Afghanistan for three months where he fought with a band of rebel guerrillas and finally to the United States where he is now reunited with longtime family friend, Peterson Conway of Carmel, and compatriot Mohammed Rahim.

But for the tourist and local resident alike, the drama behind this trio is not evident when one peruses the shelves of Conway of Asia for a relic of the Orient. The shop is located on the southwest corner of Dolores Street and Seventh Avenue.

Conway, the owner, has organized several mercy missions to bring food, medicine and supplies to the war-torn Asian nation. Ali, who repairs the rugs, has managed to escape. Rahim, who hand-cleans the expensive carpets, came to America in 1976. He has not heard from his family in Afghanistan for three years.

When the Soviets invaded Afghanistan, Sardar was a 20-year-old rug shop owner in a village called Mazrisharf. But under the Soviet — controlled regime, Sadar was ordered to join the army.

"I thought if I stayed in Afghanistan, they would make me join the army and I didn't want to go in the military because I would have to fight against my brothers — the freedom fighters," said Sardar, who learned his English in high school.

Through a friend, Sardar was able to join a band of about 15 refugees who had decided to make the perilous trek over the mountains to Pakistan.

"In the daytime, we couldn't walk. They had helicopters and they would bomb you. They would think you were freedom fighters so they would drop bombs," Sardar said.

Twice the refugees encountered small convoys of Soviet troops as they made the six-day, 300 mile journey. "At night when we were walking we would see them. We had to be very quiet and hide. They usually had a car and one tank." Sardar said.

Sardar did not stay in Pakistan long. He decided to join the freedom fighters while he went through official channels to emigrate to the United States.

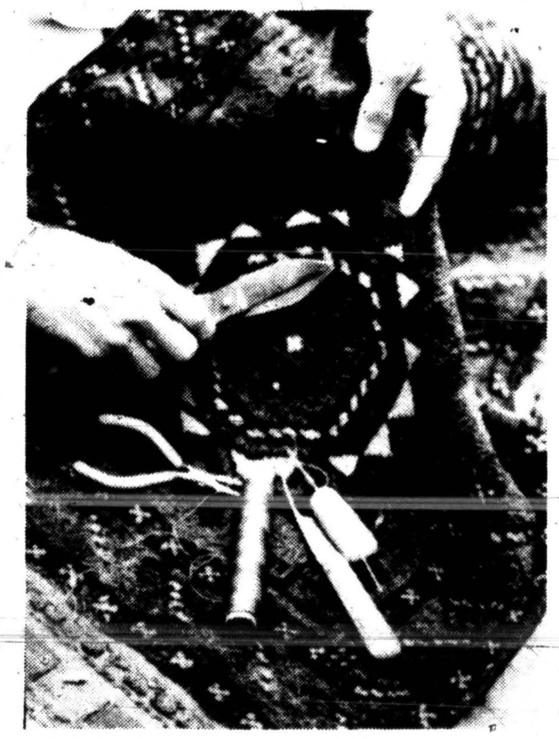
Sardar and his fellow rebels operated in the mountains near the border town of Jalalabad. The 50-member guerrilla unit would make raids on Soviet positions at night. Twice they encountered opposition during his three-month period of service.

"We liked to fight the Soviets. We used Soviet machine guns that were captured," he said. "When we would come down from the mountains, the Soviets would be scared and run away."

BECAUSE he had a brother in New York City, Sardar was able to obtain a visa so he left Pakistan for the United States in the spring of 1981.

Later Sardar contacted Conway and was offered a job in the Carmel shop.

PETERSON CONWAY (center) knew the families of Mohammed Rahim (left) and Mohammed Ali Sardar in Afghanistan. Conway has adopted Rahim as a son and Ali works at Conway's import shop, Conway of Asia. (Mike Gardner photos).



SPECIAL TOOLS are necessary to repair expensive rugs.

"Peterson knew my family in Afghanistan. He used to come and buy rugs from my grandfather," Sardar said.

"I remember Ali since he was a little boy who used to always run around the shop," Conway said.

Today, Ali repairs the rugs sent to the shop from throughout the United States.

"We have gained a tremendous reputatoin, thanks to Ali and Rahim," Conway said. "We have rugs sent to us from all over."

Besides repairing rugs for private parties, Sardar recieves repair orders from major museums, including The Smithsonian in Washington D.C. and the DeYoung Museum in San Francisco.

Sardar is an expert at rug repair, and compatriot Mohammed Rahim is responsible for the delicate task of cleaning the rugs, which often costs thousands of dollars.

Rahim, 26, came to America in late 1976 to visit Conway, but decided to stay because of political problems in his country.

"I just came to visit Peterson. I had a visa for six months. Things got real bad in Afghanistan and I became scared to go back," he said. "I haven't heard from my family in three years. I hope someday I can see them.

"I'm very fortunate that at that time it was easy to get out as a tourist. And now the only way to get out is to escape to Pakistan, like Ali did. If you get caught, you go to jail and will probably never be seen again."

MOHAMMED RAHIM hand cleans the rugs.

Conway had done business with Rahim's family in the village of Bamyan, and the Carmel importer decided to give Rahim a job so he could stay in this country.

FOR RAHIM, cleaning a rug worth thousands of dollars is an art form.

"You have to know what material the rug has, how old it is and the dye used," he explained. "You have to use special soap and cold water. There is only one person I know of that still washes rugs by hand."

Rahim explained that the hand-woven rugs lose their color in a few years after several machine washings. "After two years, the colors will change or begin to fade. I use vinegar and special soap to bring the original colors back."

It takes Rahim about an hour to wash a normal-size rug and three days to dry it. He then hand brushes it.

Conway developed his ties with Afghan families when he was a Peace Corps volunteer in that country from 1970 to 1972. He established a handicraft export business to give the Afghans "a source of hard currency in western dollars."

Fluent in the language, he served as an interpreter for United Nations officials in Afghanistan from 1972-1973.

Conway, appalled by the Soviet invasion, raised nearly $85,000 in 1980 for a mercy mission to Afghanistan. The money paid for food, medical supplies and clothing.

Conway flew to the Khyber Pass to hand-carry medical supplies to a group of 1,200 afghans suffering from exposure.

In an interview with the Pine Cone in the fall of 1980, Conway explained why he is concerned about the plight of the Afghan people.

"I love the Afghan people. The godparents of my children are Afghan. Hundreds of my friends have been killed since the Russian invasion.

"To them, freedom is more important than anything. That is why they cannot live as refugee or under the thumb of Russian oppression."

Library posts closing hours

LIBRARY AIDE Stephanie Carozza taped over the "Sunday hours" on the front door of Harrison Memorial Library in Carmel, which marked the end of library service on Sundays and most holidays. The decision which became effective July 1, was made in May by the library board of trustees in anticipation of a reduction in county reimbursements. Carmel library has received $160,000 in reimbursements from the county this fiscal year for service to non-city resident patrons. However, the county has notified all muncipal libraries that the reimbursements will be reduced in the 1982-83 budget. Negotiations continue on just how much the reimbursements will be cut; the 1981-82 contract has been extended on a month-to-month basis until a compromise can be reached. However, trustees have said that the library can not afford to remain open on Sundays and holidays even if the county approves reimbursements at 1981-82 levels. (M.G. photo).

Business Beat

Are there too many Carmel jewelry stores?

By FLORENCE MASON

THERE ARE at least two Carmel businessmen who believe that there are too many jewelry stores in this city.

Gary Goldstein, owner of B&G Traders, and Kirkor Kocek, owner of Kocek Jeweler, presented a formal complaint to the Business License and Code Review Board.

The complaint, spelled out in a memorandum to the board signed by both men, requested the city "to halt granting new business licenses for sale of jewelry or adding jewelry to existing business licenses."

The memorandum also said "there are over 55 jewelry stores in the city limits and about 25 other stores selling jewelry — more stores selling jewelry than any other classification of business." The statement concluded: "The board has greatly disturbed the quality of business in this field while protecting other business unfairly."

Goldstein appeared before the board to ask that restrictions on the number of jewelry stores be added to the general plan. He said many of these stores have one-half price sales "that are not true sales because they increase the markups first." He said tourists shop "by price" from store to store and owners make adjustments in their prices according to what others charge because customers demand it. "It has become dog-eat-dog," he said. "Competition is a good thing but this is overkill; supply and demand has lost its meaning here."

Goldstein said customers ask: "What's wrong with Carmel?" because there are so many sales. To City Administrator Doug Peterson's question, "Why is there so much interest in selling jewelry in Carmel?" Goldstein replied: "Because it looks so easy to make a profit."

Peterson said the number of jewelry stores in Carmel is not affected by the current general plan moratorium and that there would be an opportunity for residents to express their opinions about such matters on the general plan questionnaire. He added that the jewelers' complaint would have to be considered in relation to the effects on the entire business area of having so many jewelry stores.

Building Inspector Ron Warren asked Goldstein how he would have felt if the board had turned him down when he applied for a license "because we didn't like your business." He then answered his own question: "You would have resented it." Warren said he resented any implication in the complaint that the board could consider competition as a factor in their deliberations.

"The jewelers are going to have to clean their own houses, form an association to deal with this kind of problem," he said.

Goldstein replied that this was tried last year but it didn't work. He asked: "Why shouldn't there be the same rulings for jewelry shops as there are for gift shops and restaurants?" Warren replied that such an addition to the present moratorium would have to be approved by the city council. Warren told the other board members that he had had a phone call last week from a third jeweler who was upset about the same thing.

"But last year, that man had screamed about display controls. That's why I say that the jewelers should get together and clean it up on their own, as other industries have," Warren said.

City Administrator Peterson's tone was conciliatory. "This board is not a benevolent despot deciding what is good or bad for the community. The members of the board may have personal concerns about certain businesses, but our role is to gather information and base our decisions on existing laws," he said.

Peterson suggested that the letter from Goldstein and Kocek, with a summary of the board's discussion, be sent to the planning commission and the city council. The board agreed.

Peterson also suggested that the Carmel Business Association be asked for information and opinions about business practices as well as the numbers of each kind of business.

The complaint from Goldstein and Kocek listed more than 50 stores they defined as "jewelry stores." However, that list included a number in which the sale of jewelry is not the store's primary business. Carmel businesses licensed primarily as jewelry stores number 37, according to city records. Two more licenses are pending.

ON THE BRIGHTER SIDE: THE ECLECTIC MR. WATKINS

Wilbur Watkins will open The Tobacco Company in The Barnyard. That's especially interesting when you consider his background. He was a Marine and a qualified jet pilot, as well as the youngest buyer for Filene's in Boston, the largest ready-to-wear store in the country at that time. Watkins was also president and chief executive officer of General Paint Corp., chairman of a select committee to resolve major differences between the faculty of the Stanford Medical School and local physicians, president of the corporation and chairman of the finance committee of the San Francisco Seals baseball club, field instructor for Harvard Business School in a project to develop and carry out a five-year marketing plan for a major manufacturing company, the first executive administrator of the Palo Alto Medical Clinic, founder and managing trustee of the nation's first downtown high-rise retirement center. Most recently, he was chairman of the Applied Science Corp. in Santa Clara.

That's only part of the experience for which Bill Watkins won membership in the prestigious Young Presidents Organization and a Distinguished Citizen Award from the Palo Alto City Council, among many honors.

Why is The Tobacco Company here now? "It's something I have always wanted to do," Watkins said. "I've known that since the time when I was at Filene's. I left there to get out of the merchandising rat race but I knew that sometime I would have my own store."

Watkins' parents moved to this area in the 1960s and as a visitor he saw the possibilities for bringing that plan to realization. Last year, the last of his four children married and the time seemed ripe.

The new store reflects the scope and variety of Watkins' interests. There are electronic gadgets such as scales and calculators, health items (blood pressure testers, for example), golf accessories, cordless phones, tobacco, pipes and cigarettes. Also, "what I'm looking forward to the most, for myself and my customers — a wide choice of national and international newspapers. I have always loved them. It's such a great way to find out what people are really thinking — all over the world!"

BILL WATKINS says he got tired of the big city "merchandising rat race" and came to Carmel to open The Tobacco Company in The Barnyard.

Watkins lives on Valley View in Carmel, right near the water, which he loves. "I'm on the beach morning and evening." Not one to stop having eclectic interests now, Watkins looks forward to continuing a long-time involvement in drug rehabilitation work when he gets better acquainted in this area.

FRIENDLY FURRY koala bears seem right at home with Vicki Stewart, who will open Kiwi Krafts with her husband, Hampton. The store will be located in the new building on the southwest corner of Dolores Street and Seventh Avenue. (M.G. photos) and other items made with opossum fur may prove to be irresistible.

At least that is the hope — and expectation — of Hampton and Vicki Stewart, opening "Kiwi Krafts" in the new building at the corner of San Carlos Street and Seventh Avenue. It's on the ground floor, toward the back of the courtyard.

The toys include opossums stuffed with wool and covered with their own soft fur, koala bears similarly garbed, and puppets — all of these in various sizes. As with the slippers and other items, the Stewarts count on the beautiful soft fur to appeal to sight and touch.

Hampton Stewart said New Zealand has always been a favorite spot of his. "It's a very hospitable country," he said. On a trip several years ago he saw opossum fur gifts in stores and noted that they seemed to be selling well. "They were the finest quality stuffed animals I have ever seen."

The Stewarts and sister Natalie Tunney are not new to the Peninsula business scene. There has been a family produce business in Salinas for many years and Hampton and Vicki Stewart are also owners of the Norberg Travel Service in Carmel.

Present plans are for Natalie Tunney to buy the Stewart Packing Co.; the family will also continue to operate the travel service, which they purchased several years ago from former mayor Gunnar Norberg.

The Stewarts, who now live in Pebble Beach with their "family" — one Australian shepherd — grew up in the area. Vicki Stewart was born and raised in Salinas. "Except for Uncle Sam and college, I've been here all my life," Hampton said.

SHE GOT HERE — SOONER, NOT LATER

Barbara Davies is another new business owner who feels that her roots are here. She traces her family connections back to the Harlans, who were Big Sur pioneers.

Ms. Davies' pioneering step was to form a new company which offers corporate art consulting and acquisitions, fine art appraisals and art brokering. The team of professionals is known as Art Resources Team (A.R.T.), with offices on Forest Avenue in Pacific Grove.

The company will also arrange seminars on collection and identification of fine art and will provide consultations for the marketing of fine art.

Barbara Davies came here last August from Palo Alto. She was formerly associate director of a Los Altos gallery; she also owned and operated her own gallery and art consulting business in Campbell. She was a fine art consultant to Syntex Laboratories as well.

What brought her here? "Everything!" she said. When she had her own gallery in Campbell, she set a goal of "Carmel in six years." To her delight, she made is with five years to spare. "The timing was right, especially because of the many friends I have here."

The professionals who work with Ms. Davies are Chris Grimes, of the Collectors Gallery in Pacific Grove, and David Strong, associated with the Orange Cloud Gallery in Monterey. Others will work with the Art Resource Team, as needed.

Ms. Davies lives in "a wonderful old house" on Guadalupe. She has two children.

Another activity that is very important to Barbara Davies is the Pacific Grove Art Center; she is on the board and will be guest curator for the center's August show. She also writes about art and has an article coming up in the July issue of Monterey Life. That still leaves a little time "for tennis when I can, and running, and the beach."

A PARLOR THAT OFFERS MORE THAN ICE CREAM

"We want to provide a place for families to come, for everyone to enjoy themselves; a gathering place for Carmel Valley Village."

The place M.I. and Rochana Kanafsky provide is The Ice Cream Parlor. When I talked with Kanafsky, he and his wife were working hard toward an opening on the July 4 weekend. The Ice Cream Parlor is at 1 Delfino Place, where the SPCA Benefit Shop had been located. Ice cream in all its delectable forms — cones, sundaes, sodas — is available there.

The Kanafskys came to the Peninsula from Southern California three years ago "for the usual reasons," and for a special one. "We came here to have a baby," Kanafsky explained, "for the good air, among other things." That baby — Marina — is now two years old.

Most recently, Kanafsky was sales director for The Exchange, a Peninsula advertising publication.

NAMING NAMES

Jack Hakim-Baba's Ocean Avenue restaurant was "Scandia Ocean House Restaurant" for just one week. Now it is once again simply "Scandia Restaurant."

Why the change back to its original name? That's simple: "He changed his mind." That was the explanation given by Hakim-Baba's emissary to the business license board.

Another quick name change, this one for Agop Agacanian's second Carmel jewelry store at Dolores Street and Sixth Avenue. It goes from "La Ren — Fine Jewelry" to "La Reine Jewelry." "Reine" of course means queen, and it is still close to the name of Agacanian's original store, La Renaissance, which continues in business on Dolores Street south of Ocean Avenue.

HONORED

Paul Kagan, Carmel financial analyst, has won a special award in a fast-growing field. Kagan, who publishes the only newsletter and annual reference book devoted entirely to the Multipoint Distribution Service industry, won the 1982 Jim Tanner Memorial Award for meritorious contribution to MDS. It was presented last month in Washington, D.C., at the annual convention of the MDS Association.

MDS is a 10-year-old closed-circuit microwave communications medium used primarily for residential, paid television. It is said to have potential also for data communication applications.

One of Kagan's contributions to the industry was a Multicast Newsletter introduced in 1972, when the industry was just getting started. In his acceptance remarks, Kagan noted that the first article he wrote on MDS was in October of 1971 when a total of only 33 applications had been filed at the Federal Communications Commission for MDS frequencies. Today there are 75 MDS stations in operation and another 348 for which permits or licenses have been granted or are pending.

WE ARE NOT ALONE

The rash of business closings in Carmel does not make our city unique. A recent report states that nationwide, 532 businesses closed during one week in June and that the total so far this year is 10,430. That's a 44 percent increase from the same time last year.

THE CARMEL DIFFERENCE

All that activity at Carmel Beach one day last week was for the "Oldsmobile Difference," an industrial, in-house General Motors film.

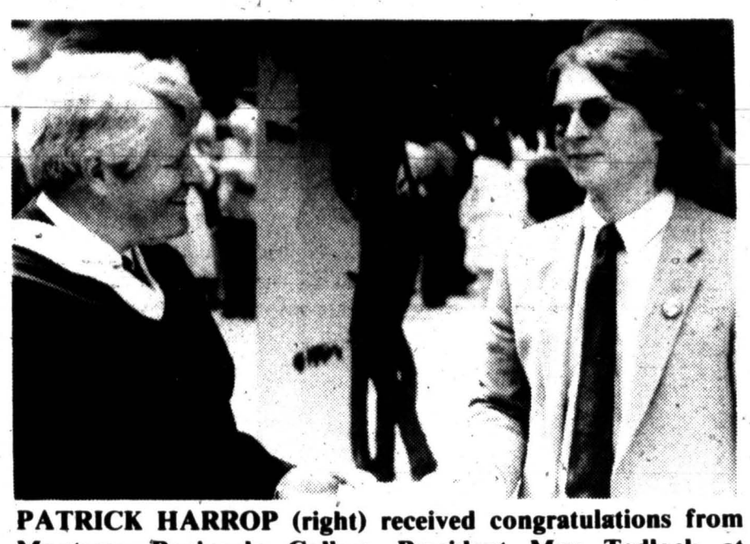
HARROP RECEIVES HEISLER AWARD

The "Francis Heisler Award of Excellence in the Theatre Arts," administered by Monterey Peninsula College, was presented Friday, June 11 to Patrick Harrop of Carmel Highlands at the MPC Graduation Ceremony.

The award, which was established in March of 1981 through funds from the dissolution of the Community Theatre of the Monterey Peninsula, is given to one or more deserving full-time students in the MPC drama department at the end of their first year, for outstanding contributions made in any one area of the theater arts. Harrop was recognized for his worth with set design and construction throughout the 1981-82 season.

After working on MPC productions through the season, he was the second student ever to be given the opportunity to design a set for a main stage production, which he did for Philadelphia, Here I Come this spring. As a result of his success with that production, he will also design the set for the fall 1982 production of Pygmalion on MPC's main stage.

The Community Theatre of the Monterey Peninsula operated for nearly 20 years from the Golden Bough Theatre and Sunset Center in Carmel under the guidance Carmel Attorney Francis Heisler.



PATRICK HARROP (right) received congratulations from Monterey Peninsula College President Max Tadlock at graduation ceremonies on his receipt of the Francis Heisler Award of Excellence in Theatre Arts.

J. MICHAEL MARK GRADUATES

J. Michael Mark, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Mark of Carmel, was among the 206 members of the graduating class at The Lawrenceville School in Lawrenceville, N.J., a national, residential, independent secondary school. Mark plans to attend Claremont-McKenna College in the fall.

ELIZABETH COPSEY GRADUATES SUMMA CUM LAUDE

Elizabeth June Copsey of Carmel has graduated summa cum laude from San Francisco State University, having maintained at least a 3.75 grade point average out of a possible 4.0. Copsey was one of 79 students in the May class of 3,100 to achieve this distinction and was recognized at the university honors convocation held May 27 on campus.

WHITACRE ENTERS COORS OPEN

Amateur golfer Andrew Whitacre from Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club has been entered in the July 6 qualifying round for the 1982 Coors Colorado Open Championship at Hiwan Golf Club in Evergreen.

He is among the 61 amateurs and 89 professionals who will be vying for one of 62 places in the championship field for the $90,000 tournament which gets underway July 22. The Craig Hospital benefit is the largest state tournament in the United States and the professionals will be shooting for a chance at the $18,000 that has been reserved for the winner.

Twelve states and 27 Colorado communities are represented in the qualifying round which has produced two eventual open champions in previous years.

ROBERT WELLINGTON BORN

Robert Leland Wellington was born April 12 to Robert and Joan Wellington of Carmel. Their daughter Paige, who is three years old, was able to see her brother as soon as he was born.

Her parents used the alternative Birthing Center at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula. Her comment upon first seeing Robby was "look at those tiny hands," followed by "goodbye yucky baby!"

The maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Holman of Santa Barbara, and the paternal grandmother, Mrs. Robert Wellington of Nebraska, visited their grandson last month.

The new father is the city attorney for Marina and Del Rey Oaks, has a law practice in Monterey and was recently the campaign treasurer for the newly-elected mayor of Carmel, Charlotte Townsend.

Joan is a physical therapist, but has been in temporary retirement the past three years.

CULTURAL COMMISSIONER Roger Fremier chatted with City Clerk Jeanne Kettelkamp.

JEAN WHITE, cultural commissioner sliced some homemade bread for the party.

CARMEL CITY CLERK Jeanne Kettelkamp administered the oath of office to Joyce Wright, who was re-appointed to the Carmel Cultural Commission June 21 and to new commissioner George Gore. Both were installed at the annual party at Sunset Center last week.

KEN WHITE, husband of commissioner Jean White, arrived at the celebration with a bottle of wine and flowers. He is also the president of the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education.

Nobody 'needs' a kitten

By JUDITH A. EISNER

"WE DON'T NEED another cat," our spouse grumbled the other evening upon discovering a kittenish waif on one of the breakfast room cushions.

Of course, he was right. No one really needs another cat, unless he is fighting a runaway rodent population. But, as many cat owners will attest, one cat often leads to another ... and another. Perhaps it's because cats require a less intensive kind of care than dogs and because three or four cats around the house don't preempt the space dogs do. Cats curl up into small, neat packages. Dogs are usually larger than cats and tend to sprawl right in the traffic lanes.

In our case, it was lack of will power that made us bring the kitten home. Our two adult cats seem to keep the gopher population under wraps and no mouse would dare enter our portals. So, no, we didn't need a kitten, but, we discovered, we wanted one.

A friend of ours is at home recuperating from a serious accident and we stopped in to visit last week. She is a cat-person whose average feline population hovers between five and seven. So we were surprised to find a charming Siamese kitten snuggled beside her in bed. She certainly didn't need another cat!

The kitten was one of a litter of six belonging to a neighbor and it possessed all the attributes of the popular Siamese breed: it was bold and affectionate, self-assertive and very people-oriented, in addition to being beautifully marked and very blue-eyed. We threatened to steal it from our bedridden friend.

Our will power held out until a subsequent visit a few days later, when we were again enchanted with this kitten. We decided to pay a visit to the neighbor to check out the rest of the litter. In less than a half hour the decision was made.

WHEN YOU HAVEN'T had a kitten in the house in several years, you tend to forget how thoroughly delightful they can be. We installed our new catlet in our son's bedroom with food, water and a litter box. (Daughter's bedroom contains two parakeets—the older cats have finally learned to leave alone. Kitten will also have to learn.)

Now this kitten, although handled from infancy, had been born outside and was not quite trustful of human intentions. She was 10 weeks old and had her own ideas about when to be caught and when not. In fact, she and her sisters led us a merry chase through a dense garden before we could capture them for close examination.

That her temperament was good could be attested to by the fact that when we first picked her up and held her she made no attempt to scratch although she wanted to be put down. She also developed a purr in short order.

Once ensconced in the house, however, she metamorphosized into instant housecat. She crawled up onto our son's bed, found the softest spot in the middle of his down comforter and curled up with obvious contentment. After all, she is pure Siamese and Siamese cats are notorious comfort-lovers.

We had some trepidation about her toileting habits, but she found the litter box and figured out its purpose almost immediately. And she found our menu, although purposely doled out in small portions, very much to her liking.

The next day, she ventured out from the bedroom to explore other parts of the house. That is when she decided the upholstered benches in the breakfast room were a favorable vantage point to watch the activities around her. That is where our husband found her and uttered his profound statement, which we wisely chose to ignore. (This is not the first unnecessary kitten we have brought home!)

FROM THIS PERCH the kitten also encountered, one by one, our adult felines and our standard poodle. She had probably never seen a dog before and ours is decidedly pushy with kittens. She loves kittens and wants to play, but doesn't understand why the kittens don't immediately reciprocate.

This kitten knew instinctively what to do. She fluffed herself up, arched her back, pinned back her ears, uttered a long, menacing growl and spat! The dog didn't read the message the first time, so kitten repeated the body English and followed through with a smack on dog's nose. Thus was a 50-pound dog backed down by a two-pound kitten!

Not long thereafter, our adult Siamese announced his desire to come in by meowing at the kitchen window (someday we'll get a cat door). We dutifully slid it open a cat's-width and watched as he began to enter, noticed the kitten sitting on the bench below him and uttered a threatening growl. Kitten growled back, arching herself again into that ready-to-strike posture. The grown cat retreated and fled.

The scene repeated itself moments later when our black half-Siamese attempted entry. She backed this 15-pound monster down as neatly as she had psyched out the other cat. Then, pleased with herself, she began to play with a catnip-stuffed toy that lay nearby.

Our grown cats are very territorial and staunchly defend their grounds from any intruding felines. Things rarely come to blows, but the black cat bears a notched ear from an encounter in the hot-blooded days of his youth. And we still occasionally are treated to the yowls of a cat fight a-brewing on the roof.

How is it, then, that this tiny waif could back down these two large cats and hold off a dog who could have swallowed her in one gulp? Puppies protect themselves from aggression by adult dogs by rolling over, assuming a special subservient posture and even urinating as a way of saying "uncle." Puppies never threaten adult dogs the way this kitten threatened the adult cats.

There may be an element of surprise here; the cats weren't prepared to find a kitten in their path to dinner and probably didn't think she would stand her ground. More research has been done in canine behavior than feline, where much of what has been written is sentimental speculation. Perhaps someday we will have a better idea of how and why this kitten behavior works.

YESTERDAY, our spouse was caught playing with the kitten, who had the good sense to climb up on his shoulder and lick his fingers (both good alternatives to ankle-polishing). He looked a little nonplussed for a moment; no one can resist kittens for long! We even spent quite a bit of time last night poring through dictionaries trying to pick an appropriate name for catlet.

Our senior cats are learning that the kitten won't really attack them if they behave themselves and the dog only needed one scratch on her nose to keep it out of reach. Within a week, things should be back to normal. That means the family will provide sufficient toys and entertainment for the kitten (like pulling shoestrings across the rug and rolling ping pong balls) and she will be in the way, underfoot and in the midst of everything. That's the joy of a new kitten who, unfortunately, will all-too-soon turn into a full-grown cat.

IN HARMONY ...

That's what riding is all about ... a calm, confident rider on a relaxed, responsive horse.

WE'RE DIFFERENT ...

The goal of the Rancho Laureles Riding Program is to teach riders to attain this special feeling.

We tailor our riding lessons to the individual. Beginners gain confidence and control; advanced riders improve their form.

We don't believe in over-mounting timid riders by putting them on more horse than they can comfortably manage, or insisting that riders jump before they're ready.

We stress the basics of correct horsemanship to teach how to ride effectively, and we make learning to ride a rewarding, enjoyable experience.

WHO CAN LEARN?

Anyone! One of the wonderful things about riding is you're never too old to learn. Horses are not just for teenage girls. They're for everyone! If learning to ride has been a dream of yours, we can make it a reality!

EXPENSIVE?

Riding lessons actually cost less than tennis, golf or skiing lessons. And you don't need any special equipment to get started. We supply horses and tack. (We're told that our school horses are a delight to ride and the best anywhere. That's an important asset in any riding program.)

BOARDING, TOO

Rancho Laureles continues to offer the finest boarding and riding facilities, including deluxe box stalls, paddocks and pasturage, plus safe sand arenas and direct access to 2,500 acres of glorious trails in Garland Ranch Regional Park.

Group or private riding lessons by appointment

To discuss your particular horse-care needs, phone Rancho Laureles Equestrian Center, "the home of happy horses."

Deaths

Anne Chafee Brien

Anne Chafee Brien of Carmel died unexpectedly in her home June 14.

Mrs. Brien was a native of Cambridge, Mass., and attended private schools in Massachusetts and in Europe before graduating magna cum laude from Radcliffe College in 1945. She earned a master's degree in art history from Harvard University, doing research at the Fogg Museum of Art in Cambridge toward cataloging the Frick Collection. She maintained a lifelong interest in the fine arts, music and literature.

Before moving to Carmel seven years ago, she lived in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., where her husband was on the faculty of Vassar College, and in Santa Barbara.

Survivors include her husband, Shirlyn G. Brien of Carmel; two daughters, Ellen B. Warneke of Cupertino and Victoria A. Brien of Los Angeles; a sister, Ellen C. Tillinghast of Burlington, Vt.; a brother, Zechariah Chafee II of St. Davids, Pa., and a grandson.

The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggested memorial contributions to Shady Hill School, 178 Coolidge Hill, Cambridge, Mass. 02238.

Martha Earle Booth

Martha Earle Booth of Carmel died June 22 at her home. She was 76.

Mrs. Booth was born Aug. 8, 1905, in Grand Rapids, Mich., and grew up in Coronado. She and her husband, Edmund, moved to Carmel five years ago from Michigan where they had lived for 40 years.

She was a former member of the Junior League of Grand Rapids and an officer in the St. Cecilia Music Society in Grand Rapids. She was a patron of the arts and continued her interest after moving back to California and was a member of various organizations in both fields.

Survivors include her husband; sisters, Esther E. Fairfield and Katherine E. Burroughs, both of Coronado.

Mission Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggested memorial contributions to the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

Gordon Stimson

Gordon Stimson of Carmel died June 22 at Community Hospital following a short illness. He was 78.

Mr. Stimson was born May 27, 1904 in Los Angeles. He served in the U.S. Army during World War II and retired as a lieutenant colonel with the 10th Mountaineering Ski Division.

He was a graduate of the University of California and received his masters in business administration from Harvard Business College.

Mr. Stimson was an active figure in the mortagage banking industry. He was a past president and co-founder of the California Mortgage Bankers Association and at the time of his death, was the chairman of the board of Wallace Moir Mortgage Bankers of Beverly Hills. He was a resident of Carmel for the past 7 years.

Survivors include his wife, Elizabeth of Carmel; a daughter, Lynne Holze of Bellevue, Wash.; a son, Marshall of Carmel; and two sisters, Mary Haskins of Carmel Valley and Diana Webb of Madison, Wisc.

The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggested that memorials be sent to the Monterey Institute of International Studies, the youth scholarship program of the Monterey County Symphony or to Meridian West High School in Pacifica.

Cary E. Giet

Cary Ellis Giet of Carmel died June 23 at Silas B. Hays Army Hospital following a brief illness. She was 80.

Mrs. Giet was born March 16, 1902, in Pensacola, Fla. She was a graduate of Florida State University at Talla hassee. She was the wife of retired Naval Postgraduate School Professor George Robert Giet.

She was a member of the Carmel-by-the-Sea chapter of American Red Cross, a member and past president of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

She remained active in the Red Cross and veterans affairs throughout her life.

Survivors include her husband, George Robert of Carmel; and two sisters, Denis Ellis Eaton of San Antonio, Texas, and Louise Ellis Strickland, of Pensacola, Fla.

Mission Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggested that memorials be sent to the Veterans Administration hospital in Palo Alto or the City of St. Jude, 2048 W. Fairview Ave., Mongomery, Ala.

Harriet Duncan Eyre

Harriet Duncan Eyre, Carmel Highlands, died June 25 at her home after a lengthy illness. She was 78.

Mrs. Eyre was born March 29, 1904, in McCook, Neb. She was the owner of the Harriet Duncan Shop, a dress store in Carmel. She had been a resident of the Carmel area for the past 34 years.

Survivors include her husband, John Gordon Eyre of Carmel Highlands, and several nieces and nephews.

Mission Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

Edward E. Rodgers

Edward E. Rodgers of Carmel died June 24 at Beverly Manor Convalescent Hospital after a long illness. He was 75.

Mr. Rodgers, who was known as Ted, was born June 22, 1907, in St. Louis, Mo. He graduated from Stanford University in 1929 and attended General Theological Seminary in New York City. He was ordained at Old Trinity Church on Oct. 11, 1932.

Rev. Rodgers was rector at Grace Church in Massapequa, Long Island, N.Y. He also served as rector at St. Athanasius Episcopal Church in Los Angeles before being recalled to the church in Massapequa. He retired from the priesthood in 1949.

He lived in the Sacramento area from 1951 to 1962 when he moved to Carmel.

Survivors include his wife, Marian Mensinger Rodgers, and stepdaughter Julie Fudge of Los Gatos.

The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family prefers memorial contributions to the donor's favorite charity.

John K. Caldwell

John K. Caldwell died June 27 at the medical unit of Carmel Valley Manor after a period of failing health. He was 100.

Mr. Caldwell was born Oct. 16, 1881, in Piketon, Ohio, and had been a Carmel Valley resident since his retirement from the foreign service in 1948.

Mr. Caldwell was with the U.S. State Department for 42 years and served under eight U.S. presidents, during two world wars and the Russian Revolution.

His foriegn duty included missions in Japan, Russia, Australia, China and his last mission, as minister to Ethiopia. During that service, he escorted Ethopian Emperor Haile Selassie to a meeting with President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Mr. Caldwell and his late wife, Grace, were in San Francisco just after the 1906 earthquake. The survived the Russian Revolution, the 1923 Tokyo-Yokahama earthquake and house arrest by the Japanese in China during World War II.

His memoirs are in the archives of the Hoover Institute at Stanford University.

Survivors include a daughter, Margaret Chest of Syracuse, N.Y.; sons, David K. of Carmel Valley, John R. of Kenwood and James T. of Beandon, Ore.; five grandchildren and seven greatgrandchildren.

The Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

The family suggested memorial contributions to the donor's favorite charity.

Nadine Bullock

Nadine Bullock of Carmel Valley died June 24 at Community Hospital. She was 55.

Mrs. Bullock was born Jan. 25, 1927, in Texas and had been a resident of the Peninsula for 30 years. She was known as Xnadu and operated the Open Door Gallery in Carmel for more than five years.

Survivors include her husband, Will of Carmel Valley and her mother, Arena Hosea of Monterey.

Mission Mortuary was in charge of arrangements. The family suggested that any contribution go to the "Open Door Trust" for publication of Mrs. Bullock's work. The trust account is being administered by the Carmel Branch of Crocker Bank.

BISHOP THADDEUS SHUBSDA

Ceremonies will mark installation of Bishop

"I choose to live in Carmel."

With quiet dignity and a subtle sense of humor, the newly appointed bishop of the Diocese of Monterey, Thaddeus Shubsda introduced himself at a press conference in the Parish Hall of the cathedral at the Royal Presidio Chapel on June 21.

"I choose to live in Carmel at the Mission. I shall model my life as a bishop on the patron saint of the cathedral and of the Carmel Mission, San Carlos de Borromeo, the 16th Century Archbishop of Milan, who visited every parish in his jurisdiction. I shall observe and listen to the people of all classes," he said.

Bishop Shubsda is to be installed officially in ceremonies at 1 p.m., Thursday, July 1 at the Carmel Mission Basilica.

The Diocese of Monterey includes the counties of Monterey, Santa Cruz, San Benito and San Luis Obispo, some 8,500 square miles with a total population of 650,000 people — one fifth of whom are Catholic.

Bishop Shubsda speaks, reads, writes and preaches in Spanish and he has worked in Spanish parishes since his ordination. He admitted that his Polish was rather limited but that he would get help from the local Polish community to write a letter to Pope John Paul II and invite him to visit Carmel.

"The Pope is a missionary and I would be happy to see him kneel at the grave of the great missionary and apostle of California, Padre Junipero Serra," he said. The 200th anniversary of Padre Serrs's death will be Aug. 28, 1984.

Timothy, Cardinal Manning, the Archbishop of Los Angeles, is to preside at Bishop Shubsda's official installation at Carmel Mission Basilica, and will preach the homily at the Mass.

Bishop Shubsda received his Episcopal Ordination from Timothy Cardinal Manning on Feb. 19, 1977 at Saint Vibiana's Cathedral, Los Angeles, where he served as associate pastor from August of 1955 to January of 1964.

He was auxiliary bishop of Los Angeles and was the Episcopal vicar for Santa Barbara County from March 1977 until the present Holy Father named him the second bishop of Monterey June 1, 1982. The installation ceremony will be attended by most of the Catholic hierarchy of the western states.

Monterey County was one of the original 27 counties in the state after it became a United States possession.

Father Farrell's wisdom

Fear is a low motive, but it is effective

Rotary, La Playa Hotel, June 23
A Nautical Prayer

Once on the bridge of a Norwegian freighter bound for Manila, the Captain observed that "there are no atheists in fox-holes." I'm sure that is true; but there are none on ships at sea either. He then quoted from the 107th Psalm: "They that go down to the sea in ships that do business in great waters. These see the works of the Lord and His wonders in the deep." (The modern translators of the Bible have really worked over this psalm to its detriment as they have done to the beloved and poetic 23rd The Lord Is My Shepherd.)

In life, we encounter frequent storms, squalls, and rough seas as we sail from launching to beaching. We suffer from physical, mental and spiritual turmoil. We are subjected to anxiety, fear, depression and confusion. Often, we take out our frustrations on our families and friends.

Like the captain in a storm who waits too long to call for help because he fears that he might lose his ship or its cargo to salvage, we show our false pride and misplaced independence; however, a call for help shows that we believe that the Lord is watching and that He has the power to rescue us.

There is a price to pay; we have to give up our selfishness and tell him we will keep His laws. How huge do the waves have to be, how fierce the winds, how near the rocks before we are willing to cry out "Lord, help us, we perish"?

A philosopher once said that fear is the lowest of all motives but no one can deny that is the most effective. Amen.

Hidden Valley Masters Festival of Chamber Music this weekend

A musical Fourth of July weekend is promised to patrons of the Hidden Valley Masters Festival of Chamber Music, July 1-4 at the Hidden Valley Theatre in Carmel Valley. Series and individual tickets are now on sale for the Festival, which will offer six concerts performed in four days for a chamber music program unprecedented in West Coast musical history.

Included in the Festival repertoire will be chamber works from the major musical periods from Baroque to contemporary by Vivaldi, Bach, Beethoven, Mozart, Brahms, Schubert and other great masters to modern pieces by Kuhlau and Janacek.

Heading the impressive list of guest artists who will perform in the Festival are flutist Julius Baker, solo flutist of the New York Philharmonic, and violinist Glenn Dicterow, concertmaster of the New York Philharmonic. Mr. Baker has appeared as soloist throughout the world and has made numerous recordings.

For the past ten years, he has conducted Flute Master Classes at Hidden Valley Music Seminars and will lead two classes this year, one before and one after the Masters Festival. Baker will also appear in a solo flute recital at Hidden Valley on July 5.

Glenn Dicterow made his debut as a soloist with the Los Angeles Philharmonic at the age of 11. He has won awards at prestigious international competitions and has appeared as soloist with many leading American orchestras. Mr. Dicterow has also given Master Classes at Hidden Valley.

Other Festival artists include:

• Lorne Munroe, Principal Cello of the New York Philharmonic since 1964. A student of Gregor Piatigorsky, Mr. Munroe has performed as soloist with many orchestras and chamber groups and in recital throughout the U.S., Canada and Europe.

• Joseph Robinson, chosen by Zubin Mehta from among 37 candidates to succeed the legendary Harold Gomberg as Solo Oboist of the New York Philharmonic in 1977, he is established as one of America's leading performers on the oboe.

JULIUS BAKER, solo flutist of the New York Philharmonic, will appear in the Hidden Valley Masters Festival of Chamber Music over the July 4th weekend. Baker will also give a solo flute recital on July 5.

• Philip Myers, Solo Horn with the New York Philharmonic, formerly Principal Hornist with the Minnesota Orchestra and a successful recitalist.

• Judith LeClair, Principal Bassoonist of the New York Philharmonic, also Principal Bassoonist of the San Diego Opera and the San Diego Symphony Orchestra.

• Leonard Davis, Associate Principal Violist of the New York Philharmonic and violist of the Philharmonic String Trio of New York, a well-known teacher of viola in New York area colleges and universities and Principal Violist for the recording orchestras of RCA, Columbia, Vox Everest, Contemporary and Grenadilla.

• Peter Simenauer, Associate Principal Clarinetist with the New York Philharmonic since 1960, and member of the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra prior to coming to the United States.

• Harold Dicterow, principal of the Los Angeles Philharmonic's second violin section since 1946.

• Lisa Emenheiser, pianist, winner of the 1979 Young Artists in Recital Competition and frequent performer in New York City.

• Jonathan Feldman, pianist, graduate of the Juilliard School and recitalist and guest soloist, including appearances with the Boston Pops.

• Janee Munroe, viola, a faculty member of the Juilliard School of Music and frequent performer in music festivals and chamber music concerts.

• All concerts will be performed in the round in the intimate, 350-seat Hidden Valley Theatre, affording concertgoers a rare opportunity to see and hear from no more than 30 feet from the performers.

DONT'T LET THE informality mislead you. The six musicians in rehearsal for the Masters Festival of Chamber Music are among the finest in the land! The Festival will offer six chamber music concerts performed Thursday through Sunday, July 1-4 at the Hidden Valley Theatre, Carmel Valley. From left, the players are: Julius Baker, flute; Joseph Robinson, oboe; Lisa Emenheiser, piano; Philip Myers, French horn; Judith LeClair, bassoon; and Peter Simenauer, clarinet.

Works planned for the four-concert repertoire include: Sonata for Flute and Harpsichord, J.S. Bach; Short Work for Piano — Four Hands by Schubert; Quintet for Piano and Four Winds by Mozart; Serenade in D for String Trio by Beethoven; Concerto in D Minor for Oboe, String Quartet and Harpsichord by Vivaldi; the Trio for Horn, Violin and Piano by Brahms; and Duo for Violin and Cello by Kodaly.

A gala wrap-up to the Masters Festival will be a salmon barbecue on Sunday, July 4 at 5 p.m. Scheduled between the matinee and evening concerts, the barbecue will enable patrons to meet the festival artists and celebrate the Fourth of July in a relaxed, outdoor setting.

Hidden Valley Music Seminars, An Institute for the Arts, was born out of a deep concern for the development of extraordinarily talented young artists. Since 1962 it has offered summer music seminars for gifted high school musicians selected by audition from all over the country. In 1967 Hidden Valley (named for its first location in the Angeles National Forest of Southern California) moved to the Monterey Peninsula where, ten years ago, it moved to its present 10-acre campus in Carmel Valley, approximately 12 miles from scenic Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Hidden Valley broadened its scope with the establishment of a children's theatre group, musical theatre productions and the debut of its Opera Ensemble in 1974. Since then, the opera program has become one of the most widely respected training ensembles in the country.

Other popular programs include a series of Master Classes which have attracted such musical notables as Madame Elisabeth Schwarzkopf, Julius Baker and Glenn Dicterow, a Dance Program and a Chamber Ensemble.

Among widespread praise bestowed on Hidden Valley, cellist Gregor Piatigorsky, on the occasion of his visit to the campus, commented: "I want Hidden Valley no longer to be hidden from the world."

Patrons tickets to the Masters Festival of Chamber Music also make a direct contribution to Hidden Valley Music Seminars. The cost is $75. Series tickets, which entitle the holder to attend all four separate concerts, cost $40. Individual concert tickets are $12.

Sunset views:

Mariachi music turns him on

By RICHARD TYLER

AT THE MENTION of mariachi, Bill Faulkner's eyes light up and his entire being becomes more animated as he begins to talk about his favorite past time.

Bill Faulkner's family moved to the Monterey Peninsula in 1952 when Bill was three months old. He attended Carmel Woods School, Sunset School, Carmel Junior High (now known as Carmel Middle School) and Carmel High School. He continued his studies at Monterey Peninsula College and after two years transferred to University of California at Berkeley where he received his degree in music majoring in enthnomusicology.

To be practical, he also minored in mathematics and computer sciences. Shortly after graduation, he was given an opportunity to teach at University of California at Santa Cruz. The subject? The Music of the Mariachi.

At 16, Bill started to study music when he was given a banjo. He became interested in bluegrass. However, one day while attending a local flea market, he bought a mariachi record for 25 cents. He had no idea what is was all about, but the cover with its colorful design intrigued him. Listening to the recording later he realized that what bluegrass was to him, mariachi was to the Mexicans. He heart rhythms that seemed strange to him and his interest was peaked.

Perhaps some of this curiosity and interest in Mexican music and culture came for his fiancee who is of Mexican descent. When they first met, her parents spoke very little English so he learned Spanish in order to communicate with them. As his studies of mariachi continued, his fiancee's mother brought back a guitarron from one of her Mexican visits. That was eight years ago. The next year she returned with a vihuela and his collection was started. Of course, he was learning to play these instruments and became well versed in the necessary techniques.

About a year before he started teaching at Santa Cruz, he performed with a trio and other mariachi groups. After his class was over, his students wanted to continue performing together. He started a group with these students and when for one reason or another some of them had to leave he replaced them with local musicians.

Included among those who joined was one of his former elementary school music teachers who is still with the group. Over a period of time the group became a performing organization and they chose the name of Mixtlan which means "place of the clouds." They interpret it to mean "place of mixed people" for the group is made up of men and women, which is very rare in a mariachi band.

BILL HAS also put to good use his studies, for he now teaches computer science at the Naval Postgraduate School.

"Teaching computer is enjoyable because of the incredible logic and the challenge of the programming" he said. "It is a personal challenge to write a program and do it right. Mistakes are human — not computer. It is also exciting to inspire people to understand and enjoy working with the computers."

He intends to remain on the peninsula since Monterey is home. He would like to continue to grow with the mariachi. They have been given many exciting opportunities. Their biggest break was going to Mexico last summer. They decided to go to listen and learn from those who live with mariachi every day. But once they were there, they were asked to play and ended up playing more often than they got to listen.

The Mexicans were very impressed and the Mariachi Mixtlan

What's playing at the movies

Annie: A musical inspired by one of America's favorite comic strips since it began in 1924, Little Orphan Annie. The film which has drama, humor, thrills and music, is about the trials and tribulations of Annie and her dog Sandy. Other familiar characters are Daddy Warbucks, Punjab and Rooster. Rated PG. At the Cinema 70.

Author! Author!: A sensitive and warm-hearted comedy about a New York playwright, Ivan Travalian, played by Al Pacino, whose new play is about to open on Broadway and whose wife suddenly leaves him — leaving him to care for their five children, four of whom are hers from three previous marriages. Tuesday Weld stars as the soon-to-be ex-Mrs. Travalian and Dyan Cannon as the Hollywood actress who stars in Travalian's play and hopes to assume the lead in his love life. At the Village Theater.

Bambi: The perennially popular animated creation of the Disney studios. The story of a little fawn and his adventures as he grows into a majestic stage. Rated G. At the Dream Theater.

Blade Runner: Starring Harrison Ford. Rated R. At the Center Cinemas.

Diner: The film is set in Baltimore in 1959, and a mixed group of Jewish and Catholic buddies in their early twenties stay up Friday nights comparing notes on girls, lapping up French fries at their favorite diner, and tearing around town. Starring an outstanding group of young actors: Kevin Bacon, Mickey Rourke, Steve Guttenberg, Timothy Daly, Paul Reiser and Daniel Stern. Rated R. At the Dream Theater.

E.T.: The Extra-Terrestrial million-dollar creature from outer space who has a magical life of its own. A Steven Spielberg fantasy. Rated PG. At the Valley Cinema.

Firefox: Produced and directed by and starring Clint Eastwood. Eastwood plays an American fighter pilot chosen to steal a sophisticated Russian jet, the most devastating killing machine ever built. At the Golden Bough.

Megaforce: Edward Mohair stars. Rated PG. At the State Three Cinemas.

Rocky III: Possibly the best of all the Sylvester Stallone Rocky films. At the Hill Theatre.

Rocky Horror Picture Show: A movie about two teenagers and a transvestite from another planet. Fri. and Sat. midnight show. At the Dream Theatre.

Star Trek II — The Wrath of Khan. More exciting adventures and special effects with the same Star Trek crew, William Shatner and Leonard Nimoy, to provide the thrills. Rated PG. At the State Three Cinemas.

The Secret Policeman's Other Ball: An imperfect but often stunning live performance film of Monty Python high lights from two benefit performances in London. John Cleese, Graham Chapman, Michael Palin and Terry Jones find that rare area between pure absurdity and the pure essence of things. Rated R. At the Dream Theater.

The Secret of Nimh: Animated fantasy film produced by Don Bluth, featuring the voices of John Carradine and Dom DeLuise. Rated G. At the State Three Cinemas.

The Thing: John Carpenter who gave us Halloween I and Halloween II now gives us The Thing, a science fiction thriller starring Kurt Russell. Rated R. At the Regency.

Film review:

'Annie' shouldn't have cost $60 million to make

By LISA JENSEN

Annie. With Aileen Quinn, Albert Finney and Carol Burnett. Written by Carol Sobieski. Directed by John Huston. A Columbia Pictures release.

Sixty million dollars was too much to spend on Annie. Judging from the results onscreen, the money doesn't seem to have bought any more talent — just more bodies and more expansive sets (most of which, like the huge corridors of the Warbucks mansion or the mock-up of the Radio City Music Hall stage, are not visually distinct, despite their vastness).

Of course, one of the major pre-production expenses was the nation-wide search for an actress to play Annie, which resulted in the casting of 10-year-old Aileen Quinn. A real trooper, Quinn taps nicely, never forgets to smile at the camera and has a pleasant singing voice (although it lacks the power to really put over the anthem-like "Tomorrow").

Unfortunately, Quinn is encouraged to mug shamelessly by director John Huston (who, admittedly, hasn't had much experience directing 10-year-old girls). She's always popping her eyes, crinkling up her nose or thrusting out her lower lip. What's more, she's made up to look like the cartoon Annie with frizzed, orange-dyed hair while everyone else looks relatively normal. When she's dancing with sultry Ann Reinking or playing with her fellow-orphans, she looks like a cartoon figure matted into the live action, like Jerry the mouse dancing with Gene Kelly in Anchors Aweigh.

Happily, the film boasts a fabulous supporting cast. Finney is brilliant as Warbucks. Sly, self-possessed and never hammy, he steals every frame he's in right out from under the freckled noses of his pint-sized co-stars. Burnett gets to strut her loose-limbed body and uncanny comic timing as tipsy, childhating Miss Hannigan; her venomous "Little Girls" solo is a riot.

Tim Curry (Rocky Horror's inimitable Frank N. Furter) and Bernadette Peters don't have enough to do, but they're fun to watch as Burnett's crooked brother and his tootsie. Similarly, Geoffrey Holder has little chance to show off either his exotic dancing or his deep, velvety speaking voice as the bodyguard, Punjab (although he looks terrific!). And leggy Reinking, a legendary stage dancer who makes too few screen appearances, is given only brief, incidental routines to perform as Warbucks' efficient secretary-fiancee. (In the "golden age" of movie musicals, they would have paired her with Fred Astaire and given her two or three solos.)

Arlene Phillips' choreography is the film's weakest element. It looks more like calisthenics than dancing with its cartwheeling orphans, somersulting servants and a whole carnival of jugglers and clowns who needlessly clutter up the finale. Overly busy choreography almost ruins the raucous Burnett-Curry-Peters number, "Easy Street," a potential showstopper.

It's too bad the film's small peasures are overwhelmed by the blockbuster aesthetic governing its production and release. As a simple family entertainment about a girl and her dog, Annie probably started out with the best intentions. But you can't expect a girl to retain her innocence after a $60 million joyride.

Perera to autograph Sat.

Victor Perera will autograph his latest book, The Last Lords of Palenque: The Lacandon Mayas of the Mexican Rain Forest, from 12:30-2:30 p.m. Saturday, July 3 at The Thunderbird Bookshop in The Barnyard, Highway 1 and Rio Road, Carmel.

The Last Lords of Palenque is a firsthand account of life among the Lacandon Indians of Naha in Southern Mexico. A community of 250, their genealogy, obscured by the absence of a written tradition, can be traced linguistically and culturally to the throne of Palenque, the so-called Old Empire of the great Maya civilization.

Journalist and novelist Perera and linguist Robert Bruce lived among the hach winik or "true people," as the Lacandones call themselves, observing and chronicling their imperiled Mayan culture. Their journalistic account re-creates the magic of life in the mahogany forest of Naha, dominated by the presence of Chan K'in, the community's hereditary chieftain and spiritual leader. The last ruling lord of the ancient Mayan tradition, Chan K'in is a master storyteller and dream interpreter who casts a spell as powerful as that of Carlos Castaneda's mythical Don Juan. His recitations of Lacandone legend and folklore transport us to a world that few outsiders have entered.

The Last Lords of Palenque is a valuable record of a culture threatened by modernity.

The public is invited to meet the author. For further information, phone 624-1803.

Mariachi music turns him on

was made an honorary member of the mariachi union in Mexico City. The Cultural Arts Commission in Mexico City awarded them a certificate for the furtherance of Mexican music and culture.

When they arrived in Mexico City, they were greeted by a 17-piece mariachi band comprised of the heads of the mariachi union. They were invited to play at a club reserved for special mariachi groups — El Tenampa — where the owner had arranged for a VIP press party.

Plaza Garibaldi, a coveted performance area governed by the mariachi union, which allows only recognized musicians, was the scene of one of the finest triumphs for the Mariachi Mixtlan.

While in Mexico, Bill bought a jalisco harp which is one of the original instruments used in mariachi and which is dying out as a part of the band.

Mariachi Mixtlan plays at local schools. They have performed at the Pajaro School District and the Watsonville School District; for cultural events and also educational presentations where they attempt to expose the students to the variety of traditional Mexican music through the mariachi.

There is now a group of young people in the Castroville area that have formed a mariachi band for which Bill Faulkner and his friends were the inspiration. Mariachi Mixtlan continues to help with what time and energy they have to assist this sort of group.

Bill Falkner looks forward to each performance making a new collaboration with the audience and his fellow member musicians. Constantly there are nuances that are discovered; new techniques and different approaches are always a fascination. He is constantly on the alert for other groups and individual interpretations of the music.

The mariachi band is learning some of the special arrangements of the El Mariachi Vargas de Tecalitlan, considered one of the foremost mariachi bands in the world. Many of their arrangements are musically among the most challenging in mariachi repertoire.

The group does use mariachi arrangements often done by Bill. They have started to record and recently have been working with a singer and composer on some new music. After their appearance at the Forest Theater this summer, they contemplate recording an L.P. of the mariachi. Another project being considered is to offer classes through the local junior colleges and other organizations on the history and performance techniques of maraichi music. For the present, you can enjoy Bill and his friends as they play their special blend of mariachi at the Forest Theater at 2 p.m. Sunday, July 4. There is no admission charge. I can assure you a very entertaining afternoon.

More praise for The Whaling Station Inn

John Steinbeck lived across the street from a Chinese grocery store while he was immortalizing Cannery Row. In the 1970s John Pisto spruced up this store with dark wood paneling, Tiffany lamps, hanging plants and early California artifacts and named his restaurant after the old whaling station down the hill. You're more likely to find fresh seafood here than at nearby Fisherman's Wharf. In fact, Pisto is so particular that he will only serve crab that is bought live to insure its freshness. Other local fish, such as Monterey salmon, is offered in season, along with Big Sur trout, bouillabaisse, abalone and steamed clams and mussels. The Whaling Station also specializes in a variety of meats and poultry, even quail, broiled over oakwood and mesquite charcoal. Veal appears in a number of guises including rollatini and cannelloni, and roast chicken is stuffed with a herbed zucchini dressing. Local produce — a Castroville artichoke, fresh vegetables and a tossed salad of Salinas Valley lettuce — and soup are included in the dinner price ($10.95 to $20.95). California wines number over a hundred labels, some of which are sold exclusively here.

What it's like to play for major symphony

By LYN BRONSON

CELLIST LORNE MUNROE made a favorable impression last year in recital and in his master class at Hidden Valley. In a post class rap session, young cellists asked penetrating questions about life as a member of a major symphony orchestra.

How to prepare for an orchestral career, how to audition, how to handle yourself with guest conductors, what to do about politics and favoritism, rehearsal etiquette, orchestral salaries and many other questions were asked and received candid, charming answers.

Once again, Munroe impressed his audience with the sincerity and dedication he demonstrates toward his craft as he appeared in recital recently at Hidden Valley in conjunction with his 1982 master class.

To hear Munroe live in concert is a heady experience. The passion and exuberance in his playing communicate well to an audience, and you know instantly you are in the presence of a world class artist.

His playing seems so effortless and he never draws an ugly sound out of his instrument. He can play the most inconsequential, lightweight music and yet infuse it with charm so that the emptiness of the composition is cleverly concealed.

Appearing with Munroe was the extremely gifted young pianist Jonathan Feldman, who has a similar knack of playing the most difficult music and making it seem like child's play. The piano part of the Mendelssohn Sonata which closed the program, was conceived in terms of the piano of the 1830's — a small instrument with no iron frame, brass strings, light Viennese action which probably weighed less than 200 pounds. Feldman was playing a 1300-pound Steinway concert grand designed for Brahms and Rachmaninoff concertos. Yet, he still achieved a lithe grace which was astounding.

The program opened with a Haydn Divertimento, arranged by Piatigorsky. Faultless intonation, elegantly shaped phrases, crystal clear articulation, tasteful tempo fluctuations were all there in abundance. Was this music of substance? No, but the performance was unquestionably that of a master from the first note. It was all presented with a grand feeling of style and spontaniety.

In the Bach Sonata in D Major which followed, Munroe launched into the introduction with a soulful cantabile which flowed like honey. When the Allegro began there was a beautiful contrast between the singing legato of Munroe and the stylish non-legato rendered by Feldman — each quite appropriate to the style of their different instruments.

The slow movement in the contrasting key of B minor was also presented most stylishly, yet never academically. The musicians again demonstrated an easy enthusiasm and natural grace.

The finale of the Bach had a steady, unhurried pace which made it irresistibly attractive. One of the highlights of this movement was Feldman's incredibly deft and controlled passagework.

ONE UNUSUAL novelty on the program was a work entitled Four Elegies and Epilogue for Unaccompanied Cello by the French Composer Marcel Dick, born in 1898. Well written for cello, these elegies exploit conservative aspects of the cello's capabilities rather than advanced 20th Century compositional techniques.

The Four Elegies were uniformly serious and entirely confined to single note legato playing. There were no double stops or gimmiky special effects. Again, this was not profound music but the performance made the audience forget that.

The Elegie by Faure which followed was a horse of another color, you might say. One of the lush masterworks for cello, it was superbly played by Munroe and Feldman. The subtle palette of colors they achieved was stunning. Nothing was done for effect, however, but rather to enhance the design and contour of the music itself.

Simply stated, it would be difficult to imagine this work any better played.

In the Saint-Saens Allegro Appassionato, Monroe threw caution to the wind, pulled out all the stops and gave a virtuoso performance of a standard cello favorite. It is a lightweight work, of course, but it was so nicely played it was over too soon and you found yourself wishing the piece were longer.

The crowning work of the evening was the Mendelssohn Sonata, Op. 58. All the earmarks of Mendelssohn's piano writing are apparent from the start of this attractive work. The piano is constantly spinning off light, delicate passages from one end of the keyboard to the other, and yet it is so skillfully written it is never in the way of the cello

Munroe made his cello sing like a bird and run like a gazelle through the four movements of this Sonata. It was a hair-raising experience, and the audience really loved it.

Two elegantly styled encores followed. The Adagio from Bach's Organ Toccata in C Major and The Swan from Saint-Saens Carnival of the Animals.

Big balloon races for July 4

The American Tin Cannery Shopping Mall, 125 Ocean View Blvd., near the north end of Cannery Row, invites the public to attend its third annual Big Balloon Race on Sunday, July 4.

The giant hot air balloons are scheduled to take off at about 8 a.m. depending on the weather. The Chevy Show, featuring current models from Singleton Chevrolet, will be displayed on the Mall.

Flo, the 28-foot humpback whale balloon will appear, courtesy of the Pacific Grove Museum and its Save Sandy campaign. Uncle Sam will emcee the festivities.

Valuable merchandise prizes will be awarded to those who fill out forms available in Mall stores, in which the contestant chooses what he hopes will be the winning balloon and the time it will take to reach its destination. The prizes are donated by Mall merchants; grand prize is a man's or woman's Hamilton watch from Ardan. Winners will be announced in the Mall lobby when the balloon pilots return from the race, about 1 p.m. You need not be present to win.

For more details phone, 649-6690.

GAILY COLORED giant hot air balloons ascend over the parking lot of The American Tin Cannery Shopping Mall. These balloons were contestants in the second annual Big Balloon Race held last Independence Day. The festivities this July 4th promise to be as colorful and exciting.

Musical weekend at Barnyard

The Fourth of July means music at The Barnyard, Highway 1 and Rio Road, Carmel, where a variety of live entertainment will be performed this Saturday and Sunday.

17-MILE DRIVE WAS LONGER

The original 17-Mile Drive, constructed 50 years ago, began and ended at the old Hotel Del Monte, which is now the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey. Initially the drive encircled the entire Monterey Peninsula, but now it is routed only through the scenic Del Monte Forest.

The Velvet Knights will perform a special preview of the Monterey Peninsula Invitational Drum and Bugle Corps Show Friday, July 2 at 12:30 p.m. in the Barnyard courtyard.

The Cannery Rogues barbershop quartet will perform in the courtyard Sunday, July 4 from 12-12:45 p.m. The Fun on the 4th Oom-Pa-Pa Band will play patriotic songs on Sunday from 1-4 p.m.

All Barnyard events are free and open to the public. For more information, phone 624-8842.

Two films to premiere here

Peninsula premieres of The Decline of Western Civilization and the Spanish film, Opera Prima, are offered by the Monterey Peninsula Film Society this week. The films are part of the Summer International Film Festival.

Director Penelope Spheeris uses the Los Angeles punk music scene as her focus for The Decline of Western Civilization. The film balances concert performances with enlightening and often amusing interviews.

The Village Voice called the film "cinematic adrenalin," and Musician Magazine declared Decline to be "the closest thing to a sane non-hysterical look at a violent and confusing scene that we're ever likely to see."

Decline will be screened at 8:15 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, July 1-3.

Opera Prima, directed by Fernando Trueba, centers on its loquacious journalist hero, following him through an affair with his cousin and other outrageous action.

The Soho Weekly News wrote "hilarious and romantic, Opera Prima is a comedy about coming to terms with sexual and cultural freedom. It is a sophisticated comedy of manners and morals."

Opera Prima will be shown at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday, July 7-8.

Both films will be shown in the Morse Auditorium, 440 Van Buren St., Monterey. Admission is $3 general and $2.50 for students, seniors, militay personnel and members of the film society. For more information, phone 659-4795.

Theater review:

Forest Theater 'Cyrano' enjoyable entertainment

By ANNE TELFORD

FLANKED BY TWIN bonfires, the outdoor stage of the Forest Theater lit up with its opening night performance of Cyrano de Bergerac. The evening got off to an auspicious start with clear, deep blue skies. Somewhere near the end of the first act, however, the floodlights illuminated a steady drizzle that filtered down onto actors, set and audience alike, dampening spirits somewhat.

Cyrano is an ambitious play. Edmond Rostand's dialogue is not unlike that of William Shakespeare — it is convoluted, poetic and contains the sort of wit one often has to read in order to immediately and fully grasp. As Cyrano, Rex Maxfield conveyed the difficult cadences and poetry of Rostand's language.

Roxane, as played by Renee Farjeon, gave no indication why legions of men would seek her favors, let alone, the charming and nosy Cyrano. Her rendition of the sought after heroine was too coquettish, full of little jumps in the air and melodramatic gestures.

Director Ramie Wikdahl staged the play to full advantage of the open air theater. The swordplay was particularly well handled. In the famous scene in Act One, in which Cyrano duels an opponent while composing verse, Maxfield manages the task of coordinating movement and language so that the scene flowed smoothly.

John Brady, fresh from a 17th century Moliere play, was an elegant and controlled Compte de Guiche; Howard Hinckley as the comic baker/poet, Ragueneau, received many laughs with his body English and poor poetry. Also noteworthy were the mimes whose fluid gestures and animated facial expressions were a delightful foil to Cyrano's fencing action. Their function was reminiscent of a Greek chorus.

The costumes were lovely and authentic. Period plays are always difficult to costume and stage effectively and realistically. It is a tribute to the Forest Theater Guild that Cyrano looks polished and "right."

Despite some opening night tension, largely due to the weather, Cyrano proved to be enjoyable entertainment. An evening under the Carmel stars with romance, drama and comedy combined to create a comfortable and pleasant theatrical experience.

Cyrano de Bergerac will be staged at 8:30 p.m. Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays through July 24 at the Forest Theater, Mountain View and Santa Rita, Carmel.

California Rodeo, Big Week kick off next Wednesday

Three short films at library in Monterey

Three short films will be screened at 2 p.m. today, Thursday, July 1, at the Monterey Public Library, 625 Pacific St., Monterey. The public is welcome at no charge.

I'm A Fool is a Sherwood Anderson tale concerning a young man who spins fabulous stories about himself to impress a pretty girl. A Sea In The Clouds is subtitled A Chronicle of Lake Tahoe. The film deals with the nation's ever-present problem of nature versus progress including an explanation of how the death of the beautiful lake is possible.

American Phoenix presents a story about a gold coin and its different owners during the 200 year history of America. The film uses the story of each owner to explore different aspects of American history and values.

TETHYRA AURANTIA is the scientific name for the sponge, captured here in close-up view by Drs. Lovell and Libby Langstroth of Carmel. An exhibit of their Cebrachrome prints of underwater photographs opens Saturday, July 3 at the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History.

Beneath our Kelp Beds, a photographic exhibit of life beneath the waters surrounding the Monterey Peninsula, will open with a preview party on Saturday, July 3 from 2-4 p.m. at the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History. The photographers, Drs. Lovell and Libby Langstroth of Carmel, will be guests of honor. The public is welcome.

Retired from their respective careers in medicine and physical anthropology, Lovell and Libby Langstroth discovered a new interest in marine biology, underwater photography and darkroom technique when they moved to Carmel two years ago. They enrolled as students of marine biology at Moss Landing Marine Laboratory and Hopkins Marine Station in Pacific Grove. Their photography and darkroom techniques are largely self-taught.

In their home darkroom, the doctors are capable of making Cebachrome prints from underwater transparencies. Their goal in photography is to record the form of the organism in its habitat while composing the finished print so that abstract qualities are enhanced.

They use a Nikonos submersible camera with extension tubes and a Nikon camera in an enclosure with macro lens and strobe units to create the original underwater transparencies. The resulting prints show a brilliant array of color and form coupled with exacting detail.

The exhibit will remain on view through July 31. The Museum of Natural History is at Forest and Central avenues, Pacific Grove. For further information, phone 372-4212.

"PANDORA" SCORES A HIT

To attain the high standard of dramatic artistry and scenic beauty achieved by Mrs. C. L. Carrington in her presentation of the operetta "Pandora," producer Perry Newberry will have to "go some" in the forthcoming production of "The Blue Bird."

Arts and Crafts Hall was packed to the doors last Monday evening to see and hear the pupils of Cui Studio perform.

One of the charms and attracting features of these Carrington productions is that always there are presented novel and unexpected musical, dancing and dramatic "stunts." The audience the other night was as much interested in what might issue from the big box as were those on the stage.

Mrs. Carrington is more than a music teacher. Every pupil of the studio learns grace, deportment and other essential things, and in "Pandora" these qualities were brought out.

HODGES PLANS SUNDAY MORNING HORSE RIDES

Starting this coming Sunday, a series of morning horseback rides through the surrounding country of Carmel are to be staged by the Lynn Hodges stables, Ocean and Junipero.

More than 20 persons will participate in the next Sunday's ride which will lead through the valley and up behind the Van Riper ranch. A free lunch will be provided as part of the trip, which will start from the Hodges stables at 9 o'clock. Lynn Hodges and John Middlesworth will be in charge of the trip.

ARSON AT BETTY GREEN'S STABLE

At 12:02 Tuesday night an alarm sent twenty-eight Carmel Volunteer firement to Junipero and Fifth Streets. The Betty Green Stables, which have been closed for some time, were on fire. A small Christmas tree abondoned in the little room to the left of the entrance had been ignited. Firemen said it was obviously a set fire. The fire smouldered out, and did not have a chance to burn. In spite of the lateness of the hour, the fire trucks were immediately on hand. The stables could easily have been in flames if a fire ever ignited the wooden buildings. Agnes Stith at Joe's Taxi saw the smoke from across the street and phoned the fire department.

JEFFERS TRIBUTE AT SUNSET CENTER

Poet William Everson (Brother Antoninus) and sculptor Gordon Newell will read the poetry of Robinson Jeffers during the annual Jeffers tribute to be held at Sunset Center.

Narrator for the event, to be staged and set to music with three-screen slide projection and choreography will be Dr. Rex L. Campbell, broadcaster, educator and poetry reader from the University of Utah.

The script for the program was written by Elayne W. Fitzpatrick, summer instructor in philosophy at Monterey Peninsula College, also from the University of Utah.

Steve Tosh, composer-conductor-performer with Hidden Valley Music Seminars, has composed music to the mood for the poetry against a backdrop of slides of Jeffers Country compiled by Friends of Photography.

Dancer Akami Ito will also be featured. Richard Price of Sunset Center will be in charge of projection techniques.

Following the program there will be a film From the Tower, produced by Mary Louise Love (Mrs. Phillip) Schneeberger and Robert Blaisdell of Carmel's Black Lion-Moon Gate Productions.

The film, made at Point Lobos, highlights Una Jeffers, granddaughter of the poet, reading from his nature poetry and William Scholefield, head of Carmel's Community Theater, reading Tor House.

UNDER THE OAKS & AMONG THE CACTI

BOW BEDECKED VASES enhanced the very feminine pink and green color scheme at Wednesday's Carmel Valley Community Chapel Guild sponsored bridge and canasta benefit party held at the Fellowship Hall. Jenny Adair, Tillie McDonald, Letha Regis, Vera Bautz, and Alice Wright assisted the hostess, Helen Fitch. "Heavenly Hash" and a variety of cup cakes were served during the dessert hour by Helen's granddaughters, Debra and Paulette. Prizes for first and second in bridge were awarded to: Natalie Raymond and Martha Huff. Canasta winners were Vera Bautz, first, and Lucile Ambrogio, second. Table prizes which were address books and tissue holders were taken home by: Edna Williams, Jenny Biggens, Elsie Siemens, Rosa Clark, Ollye Dajas, Iva Parsons, Gene Fairchild, Mary Young, Sara Oppenheimer, Barbara Robbins, Sally Dane, and Dorothy Wageman.

"CHIP" BELL ENTERS AIR FORCE ACADEMY

Richard Reid "Chip" Bell was recently sworn in as a cadet at the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo. Chip is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Richard W. Bell of Carmel and a June graduate from Carmel High School.

Among his numerous activities and awards, Chip was named a California Scholarship Federation Sealbearer, a Cornell National Scholar, an AFROTC scholarship winner and a Naval Postgraduate School Foundation scholarship finalist.

At Carmel High, he was captain of the water polo team, captain of the swim team and competed on the Mission Trails Athletic League water polo and swim teams. He was an officer in Key Club, president of his junior class, played trombone in the marching and stage bands and starred in student productions. Chip was also active in Boy Scout Troop 86.

His parents accompanied him to parent orientation and the Superintendent's reception.

JOHN FARR HONORED AT PANETTAS'

When John Farr, music coordinator for the Carmel Unified School District retired last week, it was the perfect excuse for a party to honor his 41 years of instruction in the field of music.

Held at the Valley home of Congressman and Mrs. Leon Panetta, who joined the sponsors in greeting the four hundred invited former students, parents and district colleagues, the retirement was toasted with champagne punch and serenaded by students from way-back-when as old friends mingled poolside and under the grape arbor on the happy occasion.

A money tree was presented to the retiree by Tularcitos principal Philip K. Smith who was chairman of the party plans. Other sponsors included: Miss Sharon L. Jones, Messrs. and Mms. John Graham, Tom Williams, Robert Whitehead, Blynn Lockwood and the Tularcitos Faculty and the Tularcitos Parent Club.

CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA
RESOLUTION NO. 82-23
A RESOLUTION OF THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA INITIATING ANNEXATION PROCEEDINGS

WHEREAS, Rowland C. Fellows, Joyce Stevens and Joe Vesel are the chief petitioners for a proposed annexation to the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea; and

WHEREAS, these chief petitioners have filed with the Monterey County Local Agency Formation Commission petitions signed by registered voters of the area proposed for annexation in numbers conforming to statutory requirements; and

WHEREAS, the chief petitioners have done all things required by law to begin annexation proceedings to the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea; and

WHEREAS, the Local Agency Formation Commission of Monterey County has identified these proceedings as "Carmel Woods Annexation to the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea; and

WHEREAS, the boundaries of the territory proposed to be annexed are described in Exhibit "A", attached hereto and made a part hereof; and

WHEREAS, the Local Agency Formation Commission of Monterey County has determined by resolution that said territory is inhabited; and

WHEREAS, the territory is proposed to be annexed to Carmel-by-the-Sea; and

WHEREAS, the reasons for annexation filed by the chief petitioners are:

a) Carmel Woods is a natural extension of the city as it is of the same character, socially, culturally and economically.

b) Carmel political actions are more likely to affect Carmel Woods residents and it is easier to participate in that political process if annexed.

c) All services are available and potentially improved if part of Carmel.

WHEREAS, the Monterey County Local Agency Formation Commission has established as a condition of their action that the effective date for annexation be 12 o'clock midnight, June 30, 1983; and

WHEREAS, Resolution No. 82-20 of the Monterey County Local Agency Formation Commission designates the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea as the conducting authority and directs the City Council of the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea to initiate annexation proceedings in compliance with said Resolution No. 82-20.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA as follows:

1) That all of the recitals herein set forth are found to be true.

2. That a Hearing on the proposed annexation will be held at: Carmel City Hall, East side of Monte Verde Street between Ocean and Seventh Avenues on Monday, July 26, 1982 — 7:30 p.m.

and that the City Clerk is hereby directed to cause notice of the Hearing to be given as provided for in Section 35222 and Section 35223 of the State of California Government Code.

3) That any owner of land within the territory proposed for annexation or any registered voter residing within the territory proposed for annexation may file a written protest against the proposed annexation with the Carmel City Clerk at any time prior to the conclusion of the Hearing on the proposed annexation as provided for by Sections 35205 and 35335 of the State of California Government Code.

PASSED AND ADOPTED by the City Council of the City of Carmel-by-the Sea, California at a SPECIAL MEETING held on the 24th day of June, 1982, by the following Roll Call vote:

PUBLIC NOTICE OF INTENT TO COLLECT FLAT RATE ASSESSMENTS FOR SEWER SERVICE

The Board of Directors of Carmel Sanitary District of Monterey County, California, will conduct a public hearing on Thursday, July 15, 1982, at 1:30 p.m. in the Council Chamber, City of Carmel-by-the-Sea, to consider a report on file in the office of the District Secretary that proposes to establish a schedule of rates for sewer service charges that if adopted will be collected on behalf of the District by the County Tax Collector on the property tax roll, pursuant to the California Health and Safety Code, Section 5473.1, rather than by direct billing.

The proposed charges to be assessed by parcel for the year 1982-83 are:

CATEGORY	ANNUAL RATE
Residential	$72/Dwelling
Motel, Hotel	$36/Room
Restaurants	*$7.20/seat-meal
Bar Area	$144/Location
Retail Stores	$72/Location
Laundromats	$60/Machine
Offices	$72/License
Cleaner (clothes)	$384/Location
Service Stations	$108/Location
Medical/Dental Offices	$144/Location
Students	$3.60/Student
Convalescent Hospital	$30/Bed
Bakeries	$228/Location
Supermarkets	$900/Location
Animal Hospitals	$156/Location
Special Users	$/Flow Characteristics

Each user entity shall be assessed a minimum charge of $72.00 per annum.

*Customer seats x meal periods (Breakfast-Lunch-Dinner)

The Carmel Sanitary District collects, treats and disposes of wastewater (sewage) from more than 6,000 residential and commercial connections in Carmel, its environs and Carmel Valley.

The fixed rate user fee for sewer srvice includes funds for current maintenance and operation costs, and current and planned treatment plant and trunk sewer construction required by State and Federal Regulations to meet environmental standards.

For information, telephone (408) 624-1248.

Ecumenical prayer service for peace this Sunday

An ecumenical prayer service for peace is scheduled for Sunday, July 4, in Custom House Plaza, Monterey, after the first-Sunday-of-the-month silent vigil in protest of the nuclear arms race held each month in front of Colton Hall in Monterey.

After the 12:30 p.m. vigil, participants will march to the plaza where the prayer service will begin at approximately 1:30 p.m.

Presenting the service of readings, prayer and song will be clergy and laity from St. Francis Xavier Church, United Methodist Church of Monterey, First Presbyterian Church of Monterey, Friends Meeting of the Monterey Peninsula, Carmel Peninsula, Carmel Presbyterian Church, Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula, St. Philip's Lutheran Church, Temple Beth-Israel, St. Angela's Church, Carmel Mission Basilica and others.

The service is sponsored by the Adult Religious Education Advisory Committee (Monterey Region) of the Diocese of Monterey.

Mariachi program

Mariachi Mixtlan will open the Sunday afternoon outdoor Forest Theater season at 2 p.m., Sunday, July 4. This marks the popular group's third annual appearance at the outdoor theatre.

The company is comprised of Monterey Bay area residents who have studied and performed mariachi music in such farflung places as Mexico City, Guadalajara and Santa Cruz.

There is no admission charge. The Forest Theater is located in Carmel at Mountain View and Santa Rita

June was a pretty good month for Carmel Sanitary board

June was a pretty good month financially for the Carmel Sanitary District Board of Directors.

Monterey County Superior Court Judge Richard Silver has ordered the Pebble Beach Sanitary District to pay its one-third cost of the Carmel water reclamation project.

And, Manager Michael Zambory has learned that the state Water Resources Control Board has agreed to fund entirely the $325,000 cost over-run in the design portion of the project.

In late May, state officials told the district that it would only fund an additional $138,000 of the $325,000 requested by Carmel.

But Zambory, aided by district president Ken McGinnis, director Paul Beemer and project engineer Dick Dowd, made a successful plea before state officials in a meeting in Sacramento May 25.

Carmel applied for the additional $325,000 because lengthy project delays caused the original design costs to increase from about $1.3 to $1.622 million, Zambory said.

Zambory blamed the cost increase on lengthy delays caused by the state and Pebble Beach Sanitary District.

Pebble Beach and Carmel have been involved in a six-month long lawsuit over sharing the costs of the project. Carmel has been awarded a preliminary judgment, but a final ruling has not been rendered by the judge.

Zambory added that a state-required report on the status of the project is required when the design portion is 50 percent completed. The design is 100 percent complete now.

Once the design is approved and financing has been obtained, construction is expected to begin on the $18.2 million water reclamation project.

The program is designed to comply with a state mandate that Carmel cease the discharge of effluent into Carmel Bay between May and October.

Carmel Bay is designated an Area of Special Biological Significance.

THE NAME BEHIND A WISE INVESTMENT

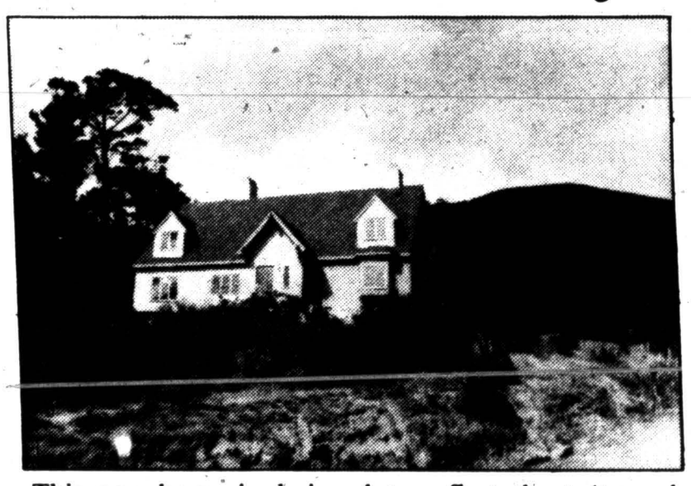
"Gwynnedd"
Merry Olde England in the Highlands of Carmel



This new home is designed to reflect the taste and charm of the Eizabethan Period and it stands majestically on a wind-protected knoll overlooking the Pacific Ocean. Created for the artist/owner and his family, the large, bright and cheery gourmet kitchen with island chopping block table and stools, black & white tile floor, french doors and charming schoolhouse light fixtures, is the gathering place for all who visit — and the focal point of a home that is every inch a delight. We suggest an appointment to see the rest — the cozy library, intimate dining room, elegant living room and enormous upper level artist studio. Plus three bedrooms and 3½ baths. A marvelous Old World feeling inside and out. An exclusive listing. Truly a value at $535,000!

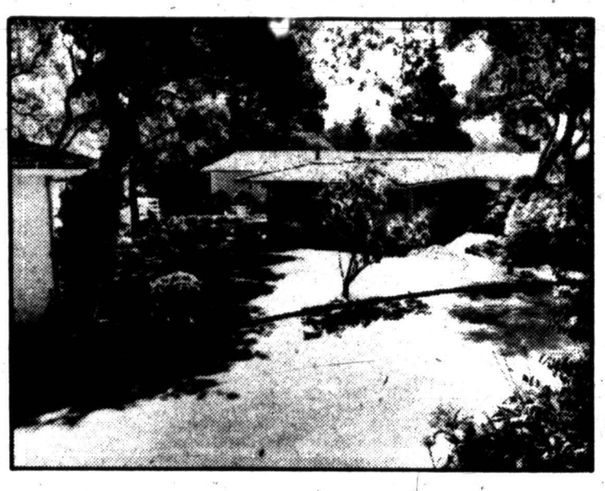
"The Only Ranch Inside Carmel"

Senators have never been noted for understatement, but the former state legislator who so described this property was right on! It has unbelievable spaces, inside and out. The lot itself is nearly an acre, dotted with drives and patios, stone walls and pathways and beautiful planting; and the house is well over 3500 sq. ft. With the guest house included, make that 4000 plus.



It's on Ridgewood Road, the long one-block street that comes off Junipero at 12th and loops back in just below 13th. The house is on the east side bordering the canyon, and a circular drive leads in (a loop on a loop) to its imposing entrance.

Statistics: entrance hall, living room, dining room, kitchen (all standard equipment, but not the way these are done!), a long lanai overlooking the canyon and a view up the Carmel Valley, a small den or game room, two bedrooms and two baths . . . all on the ground floor.

There's a stair down, which brings you to (1) the guest bedroom and bath, (2) two conjoined bedrooms and a 4th bath (ideal for children), (3) a sizeable recreation room with fireplace, and (4) storage spaces, laundry, wine cellar, etc. too numerous to detail. At appropriate points, doors open to a rear deck with a view, a kitchen-side patio with lovely flowers, and a pathway leading to the fully integrated guest house.

Overall, there are dozens of oaks, rhododendrons, fuchsias, and a collection of annuals to delight any gardener. If a ranch needs horses, then this falls short. But in every other respect it measures up to the senator's description. Each room has its own charm, and the combined effect is one that could come only from being lovingly lived-in. Decorators have added their touch, of course, but nothing but real living could supply the subtle enchantment you will find in "the only ranch inside Carmel."

It's $675,000.

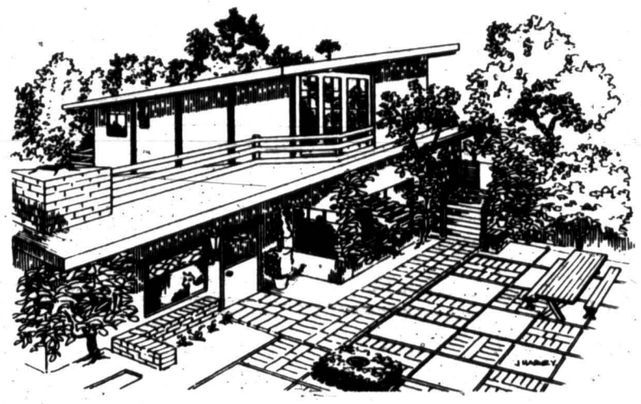
THE PRICE IS RIGHT



AND SO IS the financing on this nice four bedroom Carmel home. Post-adobe style, secluded gardens front and back, two car garage, two of the bedrooms and a bath upstairs are some of the plusses that this beauty offers ... $209,000.

JUST THREE SHORT BLOCKS FROM THE BEACH

IN CARMEL'S south-of-Ocean Avenue sector ... and on a corner lot, a superbly maintained home with three bedrooms, three baths, spacious living room, dining room overlooking sunny garden, and commodius master bedroom. Lovely gardens surround the house. Quality and location make this fine buy ... $475,000.

LEASE OPTION???

MAYBE ... On a quiet cul-de-sac just two blocks from Magnin's and the heart of the village, is a really cute hideaway. The house has a cozy fireplace, three bedrooms, two baths, a detached garage and even a hot tub. Adjacent green belt gives an added dimension to an already oversizes (and nicely wooded) lot. Nothing south of Ocean Avenue is asking as little as $199,500, is it?

"LOTS" FOR YOUR MONEY

AND THIS ONE has what everyone's looking for ... an ocean view across the fourth green of the MPCC Shore Course, one of the last white water view lots, $295,000 ... Carmel Woods 10,000 square feet homesite with distant view of Point Lobos $160,000, ... Choice homesite on Jacks Peak with five acres of lovely Monterey Bay views $269,500.

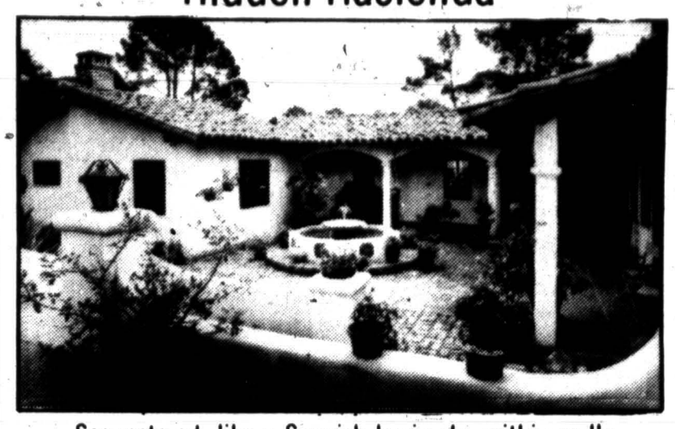
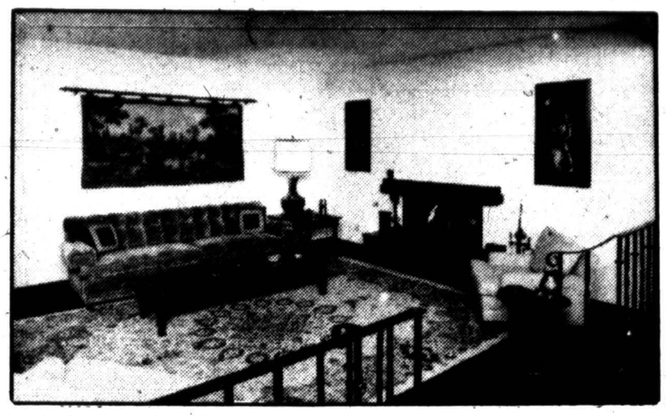
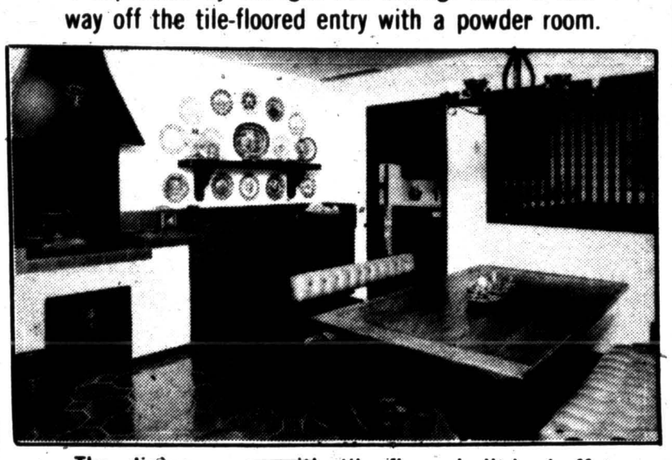
Hidden Hacienda



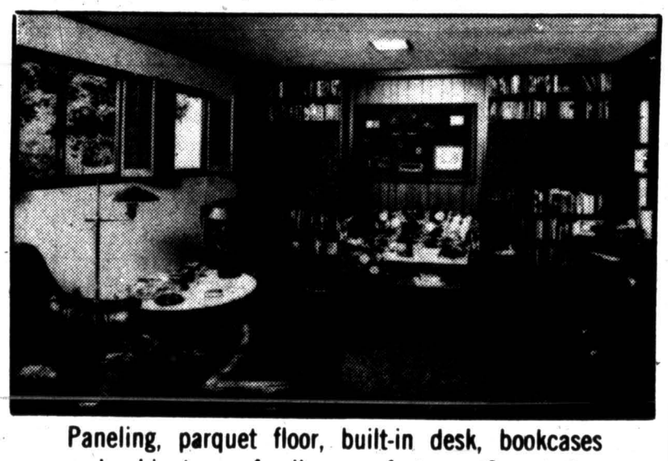
Sequestered, like a Spanish hacienda, within walls enclosing their large, sunny site at the end of a Carmel cul-de-sac, also built about a brick-paved, colonnaded courtyard with a fountain, are this enchanting home and an equally charming guest house.



The parquet-floored living room, with a fireplace, is separated by wrought iron railings from a hallway off the tile-floored entry with a powder room.



The dining room, with tile floor, built-in buffet and metal-hooded fireplace, has a spindled grille through which is glimpsed a paneled breakfast room off the tile-floored kitchen with custom cabinets, tile counters, topline appliances, microwave oven.



Paneling, parquet floor, built-in desk, bookcases and cabinets are family room features. Completing the main house are a carpeted bedroom, an adjacent bath dressing area, also an adaptable hobby center and dark room area and laundry/utility room with a pantry, wall safe, storage cabinets and access to a double garage with electrically controlled door.

Off one of the courtyard's pillared porticoes, the guest house has a living room with fireplace, also a bedroom and bath. Central vacuum, floodlighting and security systems, two furnaces and water heaters, and insulation, are among many amenities adding to livability in this romantic home. $435,000
